Arnold Says Standard Oil Balked Ersatz Rubber Here

Tells Senate Group Company Played Into Hitler's Hands In Hope of Monopoly

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold yesterday charged that Standard Oil, in its cartel "marriage" with I. G. Farben, German chemical trust, had frustrated the creation of an American synthetic rubber industry.

He said that Standard Oil delayed development in the United States of "buna" rubber, a German substitute to which it had the American rights, "because the Hitler government did not wish this rubber exploited here, for military reasons."

On top of this Arnold charged that Standard turned over to the German company its own discovery—an even cheaper but effective rubber substitute called "butyl." This was in 1938.

Data Withheld From Navy

In 1939, the year Hitler went to war, Arnold said, Standard Oil failed to give the same full information about butyl to "a representative of our own Navy's Bureau of Construction and Repair."

The agreement between Standard Oil and I. G. Farben was made in 1929. In September, 1939, Frank A. Howard, a Standard Oil vice president, met with I. G. Farben officials at The Hague in Holland, drew up another agreement, and reported to his firm as follows:

"We did our best to work out complete plans for a modus vivendi which would operate through the term of the war, whether or not the United States came in . . ."

Arnold said it was "impossible to doubt that The Hague memorandum is anything but a device for a continuance of the conspiracy throughout the war."

Nazis Gave Nothing

Testifying before the Senate committee investigating the war effort, Arnold said:

"At the direction of the German interests, Standard Oil refused to license independent producers in the United States for the production of synthetic rubber.

"It turned over all of its discoveries to Germany even though Germany declined to give them anything in return.

"The effect of this arrangement continued during the war and up to a time shortly before the filing of the information and decree against Standard Oil . . ."

The Assistant Attorney General, the Administration's "trust buster," was referring to the court action in Newark, N. J., two days ago, a consent decree against the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, whereby all of the German patents for synthetic rubber and gasoline were made available, royalty free, to American industry.

Now Playing: Brain Beats Brawn Or Virtue Triumphs

Brain won another round over brawn early yesterday morning when an auxiliary policeman of slight build encountered a housebreaking suspect who was too big to handle.

The auxiliary policeman, 20-year-old Charles Hipsley, of 824 A Street Southeast, was visiting friends at Eleventh Street and North Carolina Avenue Southeast. Shortly after midnight a crash of glass was heard, and investigating, Hipsley discovered the smashed front door window of a grocery at 103 Eleventh Street Southeast.

Auxiliary Hipsley phoned police headquarters, returned to the store, and noticed a large man slip out and duck into the lobby of a nearby theater. Hipsley hurried over and exclaimed:

"Say, I think someone's just broken into the grocery!"

"What of it?" replied the big fellow.

"We ought to look into it," coaxed the auxiliary. Reluctantly the big fellow did. Which was why the suspect was still on the scene when a police patrol car arrived.

Teacher, Denying She Hit Boy, Tells How Mother Flogged Her

DANNY LESLIE | MRS. ARTHUR LESLIE | CONSTANCE DAVIS

By the Associated Press

Lafayette, Ind., March 26.—After denying that she thumped 11-year-old Danny Leslie on the head with a book, a pretty young school teacher turned psychologist on the witness stand today to testify that her studies of that subject indicated Danny's mother "knew what she was doing" when she flogged the teacher with a belt February 27.

Miss Constance Davis, the teacher, was the State's star witness at the trial of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Leslie, Danny's parents, for assault and battery.

Mrs. Leslie is accused of having lashed Miss Davis with the belt because Danny told her the teacher had hit him on the head with a book.

Miss Davis was on the witness stand most of the day. Her version of the affair in the fifth grade school room was that Danny was talking to another pupil and that she merely turned his head with a book and told him to concentrate on his lessons.

Danny left the schoolroom a short time later and returned in a few minutes with his parents.

Smiling and speaking in a composed manner, Miss Davis said Mrs. Leslie entered the schoolroom followed closely by Danny. She War Production Boss Donald M. Nelson has forbidden further allocations of copper to the Rural Electrification Administration, thus ending all new construction of that agency for the duration of the war, it was learned yesterday.

Nelson's action, taken this week with the approval of the War Production Board in an order to conserve the vital military metal, had the effect of shaving 3200 tons of copper from the supplies which the REA had expected even after its operations were originally curtailed last fall by the former Supply Priorities and Allocations Board.

At that time, it was agreed to give REA 1500 tons of copper a month, up to a total of 10,500 tons, to enable it to finish those rural electrification projects which were already 40 per cent completed. Since then, REA has received about 7200 tons. This amount, it was believed, will be enough to enable completion of projects which were 40 per cent or more finished by December 5, but will not permit any further work on other projects under way, or the initiation of any new construction.

In the future, it was indicated, REA will be in the same category as any private utility, able to build a new power line only if the specific construction is authorized by the WPB as a war production necessity.

In closing down the REA for the duration, Nelson took a firm stand

Dynamite Blast Kills 31, Rocks Two Towns

20 Tons Set Off At Lehigh Quarry; Sabotage Doubted

By the Associated Press

Easton, Pa., March 26.—Thirty-one men literally were blown to bits today by an earth-shaking, premature explosion of 20 tons of dynamite in a limestone quarry of the Lehigh Portland Cement Co. on the banks of the Delaware River 5 miles north of Easton.

So terrific was the concussion that it was felt 50 miles away. Hardly a house or building for miles around escaped damage. Many persons were injured, including a dozen children cut by broken glass in a grade school half a mile from the scene.

"The whole world just seemed to shake," one worker said.

Bodies Hurled 300 Yards

The explosive had been assembled on the rim of the pit in preparation for blasting away an entire side. During a lull in operations some of the workers opened their lunch boxes for a midmorning snack in the spring sunshine. Then suddenly the blast let go.

Parts of some bodies were hurled 300 yards. Windows were shattered in homes in Bethlehem and Allentown, 18 and 16 miles away, respectively. Doors in Allentown homes were jarred open and windows twisted askew. A barn collapsed on a farm a half-mile from the quarry. Sleepers were tossed from beds in nearby homes.

However, 16 workers in the bottom of the pit, 120 feet below the rim, escaped injury.

James A. Gish, plant superintendent, said there was no way to determine the cause of the explosion, but that he was confident there was no sabotage. FBI agents, however, and the State Department of Labor and Industry began an

District Court Bill Clears Senate, Goes to White House

The Senate late yesterday passed and sent to President Roosevelt the bill merging the present Police and Municipal Courts into a new Municipal Court of 10 judges and creating an intermediate Court of Appeals of three judges.

Final Congressional action on the measure was greeted with praise by leaders of the local bar, who said its enactment would produce "the greatest stride in the effective administration of justice in local court history."

Chief among those who have labored for the reforms through many months of conferences and a succession of legislative drafts is Harlan Wood, author of the provision creating a new Municipal Court of Appeals and chairman of the District Bar Association's committee on relations with the Municipal Court.

Wood, when questioned last night about the measure, declared: "There will be a better coordination of the work among the judges than in the past.

"There will be better team work among them to the end that the public will be better served with a more speedy consummation of justice.

"There has been no presiding judge with full authority to control the activities of the other judges, the assignment of cases or generally to superintend the affairs of the court. As our committees have consistently urged, this has been enacted by Congress.

"Another evil existed in Police Court which under a decision of our Court of Appeals the Police Court was found lacking in power

Pepper Joins Drive Against Hours Limits

Offers Senate Plan To Mobilize All U. S. Men, Curb Property And Labor Rights

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Universal mobilization of man power, abolition of all legal restrictions on hours of work and Government control of all facilities essential to winning the war were demanded in the Senate yesterday.

Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, touched off an hour's Senate debate with an appeal for "courageous action" by Congress and a nine-point program "to streamline the war effort."

Pepper broke with the Administration on the 40-hour-week issue as leaders of organized labor appeared before the House Naval Affairs Committee to denounce legislation to limit profits, lift work-week and overtime requirements and outlaw the closed shop on war work.

President Philip Murray of the C. I. O. termed the Smith-Vinson bill as a "knife upraised" behind the back of labor, and asked the committee to "rebuke once and for all those in public life and in private life who are attempting to disrupt and divide the Nation into groups, to foment disunity, to attack labor while its heart and soul and mind and body are engaged day and night in the effort to win the war."

Green Sees Political Plot

President William Green of the A. F. L. charged sponsors of the bill are waging "an undeclared war against President Roosevelt and against the workers of America who believe in the policies of his Administration." He said American workers are "beating schedules every day," that time lost by strikes since Pearl Harbor has been "only one day per man in 30 years of work."

Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, coauthor of the Smith-Vinson bill, took the floor of the House. Criticizing charges that an organized campaign is behind Congressional mail favoring legislation, he said, "it seems passing strange that John Q. Public should be investigated because he writes to his Congressman."

A Post poll of the Senate Education and Labor Committee on the issue of profits-labor action by Congress at this time meanwhile showed the group almost evenly divided. Seven members favored reporting legislation in varying forms. Seven opposed any legislation at this time. One favored studies leading to procedural labor legislation. Three were not queried.

Finds Congress Losing Stature

Senator Pepper, presenting to the Senate his nine-point demand for total mobilization, said he was merely "reporting" to the Senate on the public opinion of the country as interpreted by him in a cross-country tour.

"The people are deeply stirred by the failure of Congress to make adequate provision for national de-

Moscow (Friday), March 27. The Red army, in a race against spring thaws and aided by night-striking Russian guerillas, was reported early today to be newly threatening the approaches to Smolensk, 230 miles southwest of Moscow, a key German defense point which the Nazis captured last August.

Dispatches said that Soviet troops had seized 16 districts in the Smolensk area and thrown the Germans partly out of ten additional localities.

The highly organized guerilla bands were said to have killed 4500 Germans during January and February—long before the regular Soviet army had reached that sector in the big winter counteroffensive.

Nazi Activity Intensified

Massive increases in German aerial strength and multiplying Nazi counterassaults on the ground involving, in some instances, superior German strength were related in Red Army dispatches from many sectors of the front.

More than 100 planes, raiders and defenders, fought a bitter battle over the increasingly important Arctic base of Murmansk, it was disclosed.

(Murmansk's importance lies in its potentialities as a terminus for United States and British supplies; there have been indications that the Russians, as a result of winter gains, have been able to use it more and more, in addition to Archangel, farther east.)

German Planes Lost

The Germans lost 11 out of 66 planes in this attack and caused no damage, a Murmansk dispatch said. (The Germans had claimed destruction of a supply ship and eight Russian planes).

The midnight regular Soviet communique said that "no substantial changes took place on the front" during the day, and announced an 11-to-6 aerial victory over the Nazis yesterday.

This announcement also told of the recapture of another inhabited locality on the Central Front where "hundreds of enemy dead were left on the field."

From other combat areas the increase in German planes was noted: In one case they outnumbered the Russians 27 to 3.

The many German counterattacks, probably on the Kalinin front, northwest of Moscow, and in the Donets Basin, were described by

U. S. Freighter Rams and Sinks Sub at Night in Caribbean

By the Associated Press

New Orleans, March 26.—The Navy tonight announced that an American freighter on February 18 ran down and sank an enemy submarine in the Caribbean, and that despite an intensive ten-hour search no survivors were found.

Lieut. Comdr. Henry Johnson, United States Naval Reserve, captain of the ship, said that in total darkness and late at night his ship sighted a form ahead 20 seconds before the collision. There was a light flashed from the object, which was partly submerged.

The freighter then crashed into the object head on with a heavy jolt and passed over it. Before the ship could turn about members of the crew heard a heavy explosion, presumably of a torpedo, and heard screams. Two men were believed sighted in the water.

The freighter returned to the spot and spent ten hours searching for survivors. None was found. The ship proceeded on its course, arriving here recently. Repairs were made and the ship will return to service.

The Eighth Naval District headquarters here late today gave out Commander Johnson's story, the first official announcement of the action. Naval Intelligence refused pictures of the freighter.

Commander Johnson said the running down of the submarine was a pure accident. His ship was running without lights at the time.

Norfolk, Va., March 26 (AP).—A small American merchant ship was torpedoed off the Atlantic Coast Monday, but through the daring gallantry of her boatswain who reboarded the sinking vessel and broke out the Stars and Stripes, she went down with the flag streaming from her pole.

Rescue ships landed 14 survivors and 4 bodies at Morehead City, N. C. Twenty members of the vessel's 38-man crew were missing and presumed lost, the Fifth Naval District said in announcing the sinking today.

"It was a good flag—a brand new one, and she was still fluttering, the last thing to go under when the ship finally settled," Boatswain Garland Henderson, of New Orleans, La., told Ensign Joseph Sierer, of the Fifth District public relations office.

U. S. and Vichy Avoid Rupture Over Axis Aid

Assurances Accepted That Fleet Will Not Be Handed to Nazis

By H. O. Thompson
United Press Staff Writer

The United States and Vichy France have ironed out major points of a dispute which threatened a rupture of relations between the two governments and, for the time being at least, all is well again, it was disclosed last night.

The United States has accepted as satisfactory categoric assurances by Vichy that the French fleet will not be allowed to fall into German hands and that French collaboration with the Axis does not go beyond terms of the armistice agreement.

Fate of the French fleet is the pivotal point on which United States-Vichy relations revolve. On this point, as well as others, it was disclosed in high quarters, Vichy has given assurances which are considered as satisfactory as possible in a situation subject to day-to-day change because of the varying degree of pressure exerted upon France by the Nazi conquerors.

Battleship Transfer Explained

Vichy was revealed also to have given a satisfactory explanation of the transfer of the French battleship Dunquerque from North Africa to Toulon, and assurances that no Axis war planes, submarines or service vessels will be permitted to enter a port in any French possession in the Western Hemisphere.

Vichy's assurances likewise constituted an admission that France had been aiding the Axis in North Africa by supplying them with food and trucks and with gasoline from

Some Success Is Predicted By Churchill

Cautiously, He Says 1942 Will Not See Only Allied Losses

By the Associated Press

London, March 26.—Winston Churchill foresaw with measured caution today a turn for the better in the course of the war and called earnestly upon Britons for a rigid stock-taking to "make sure that our fellow countrymen and our Allies have the best service from us that we can give."

The prime minister was addressing the annual meeting of the Central Council of Conservative and Unionist Associations — in other words, the inner circle of the nation's upper-class leadership. It was an earnest plea for unity of both Britons and United Nations and it included the unequivocal statement that Churchill would stamp out what he called propaganda calculated "to disturb the army or weaken the confidence of the country and the armed forces in the qualities and character of our devoted corps of officers."

Churchill's prediction of a turn in the tide of misfortune was qualified with acknowledgment that the battle of the Atlantic for the time being "has worsened again" and a somber assurance that there will be much more trouble. But he added:

". . . This I will venture to say: Just as last year I warned you that you could not expect to have successes unchecked by reverses, so now in 1942 we need not have reverses unrelieved by successes."

Now, he said, it seems very likely that Britain and her Allies "cannot lose this war . . . except through

New Delhi, India, March 26.—Ringed and attacked time after time for 36 hours, the Chinese forces at Toungoo, isolated left anchor of the Allied central Burma line, held even their outermost defenses intact tonight against Japanese pressing from all sides.

The invaders had by-passed Toungoo on the eastern Rangoon-Mandalay Road, taken Kyungon, 12 miles to the north and still held the Toungoo airdrome 8 miles above the city, but still they could not budge the entrenched Chinese about Toungoo itself.

[A United Press dispatch from Mandalay, 210 miles north of Toungoo, quoted American Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell, commander of the Fifth and Sixth Chinese Armies in North Burma, as saying that the United States was building up to give China as well as India materials and man power and that when sufficient strength is gathered, "we'll smack 'em and smack 'em hard . . . we mean business."]

Japs Drop Paratroops

On the other main road to central Burma, the Irrawaddy Valley route to Prome and the oil fields 140 miles farther north, the Japanese were moving in force, peppering the country ahead of them with parachute troops dropped from the skies to organize Burmese fifth columnists.

One large mixed enemy force was 40 miles south of Prome, another some 25 miles behind it.

Gen. H. R. L. G. Alexander issued this late communique:

"Strong Japanese forces were attacking Toungoo from all sides today, with the Chinese defenders throwing them back time after time.

"The Chinese general commanding there states that 'the situation is well in hand' despite the fact that Toungoo is now surrounded.

"The Chinese had set up a defense in depth at Toungoo and despite repeated attacks, which had gone on for about 36 hours, the Japanese have failed to penetrate the Chinese outer line of defense.

"To reduce it to bowling language, the Chinese attitude at Toungoo appears to be, 'You set them up and we will knock them down.'"

With the Chinese cut off at Toungoo, the British army now guarding the Yenangyaung oil fields north of Prome faces Japanese offensives from both east and south. Appar-

Car Hits Soldiers At Drill; 1 Dead, 9 Others Injured

Bergenfield, N. J., March 26 (AP).—One soldier was killed and nine others were injured tonight when an automobile, which Prosecutor John J. Breslin, jr., said was operated by a drunken driver, plowed into a group of 100 soldiers drilling near the 104th Engineers Armory.

Breslin said Murray Winawer, of Brooklyn, N. Y., died of a skull fracture several hours after the accident.

Breslin identified the driver as Charles Mordaunt, 35, of 204 Ivy Lane, Englewood, sales manager of an Englewood automobile agency. The prosecutor said a charge of drunken driving had been lodged against Mordaunt by Chief of Police Robert Ullrich.

Four soldiers were in Englewood Hospital and five in Holy Name Hospital, Teaneck.

By Lee Carson
International News Service Staff Writer

One of the more shapely shades of World War I has sashayed into the streamlined, stepped-up, mechanized, air-minded and armored sanctum of World War II.

Confusion and throat-clearing thundered in the halls of the War Department and a conference was hastily called to sit in judgment on the question of whether or not the American Expeditionary Forces should carry their friendly invasion as far as the altar.

In Australia the controversy over the Yanks' mass drive to the altar with the prettiest of the saucy Aussies showed all the signs of developing into an international poser. Certain churchmen and high-gaitered officials decried the A.E.F. version of welding the two Allied nations more closely. The public at large and parents of maiden daughters answered with a loud imported edition of the Bronx cheer.

As communications flooded military circles in Washington with queries on how to halt the way of a man with a maid, or if the best course of action was inaction the morale, personnel, planning and chaplain offices of the Army dusted off their best high-faluting phrases and circumlocution for a prim stand.

'We'll Win or Die,' MacArthur Vows Before Australian Chiefs

By Tom Yarbrough
Associated Press Staff Writer

Canberra, Australia, March 26.—In a khaki blouse devoid of medals or even the insignia of rank, Gen. Douglas MacArthur stood before the leaders of Australia tonight and pledged the blood and power of the United States to an unremitting crusade for freedom.

Speaking at a dinner in his honor at Parliament House, the supreme commander of the American and Australian forces made his vow and bound up the destinies of the two nations in these crisp, fervid sentences:

"There is a link that binds our countries together which does not depend upon a written protocol, upon treaties of alliance or upon diplomatic doctrine. It goes deeper than that. It is that indescribable consanguinity of race which causes us to have the same aspirations, the same hopes and desires, the same ideals and the same dreams of future destiny.

"My presence here is tangible evidence of our unity. I have come as a soldier in a great crusade of personal liberty as opposed to perpetual slavery.

"My faith in our ultimate victory is invincible, and I bring you tonight the unbreakable spirit of the free man's military code in support of our just cause.

Manila Bay Forts Bombed 6 Hours

Japs Send 54 Bombers to Corregidor And Lose 4; Skirmishing Flares on Bataan

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Corregidor took its worst pounding of the war yesterday, as 54 big Japanese bombers rained explosives on the island citadel continuously for six hours.

The sturdy fortress answered with its heavy array of antiaircraft guns, and when the score was tallied at the end of the day, the defenders were found to have had the best of it.

Damage to military installations on Corregidor was slight and casualties few, the War Department announced, while four of the Jap bombers—large craft of a new type—were shot out of the air.

Coast Guard Cutter Sunk

Meanwhile the Navy announced that the small unarmed Coast Guard cutter Acacia had been shelled and sunk in the Caribbean area by an enemy submarine. All of the ship's crew of 41 are safe at San Juan, Puerto Rico.

Survivors at San Juan said that the ship was attacked at dawn March 15, and shelled for 50 minutes before it sank. Some 50 shots were fired into the vessel after the crew took to lifeboats before the 1130-ton craft took fire and went down, they declared.

Several members of the crew—22 of whom are Puerto Ricans—received superficial wounds from shell fragments while in lifeboats. However, Boatswain Ora Doyle, presumably the Acacia's commander, was quoted by the United Press as saying that he believed the shelling of the lifeboats was unintentional and due to the bad marksmanship of enemy gunners aiming at the ship.

Sinking of the little vessel—described as a tender for buoys—brings the number of United States Navy craft destroyed by enemy action to 16. Five others have been lost by other causes during the war.

The War Department communique telling of the Japanese bombing of Corregidor said that the fortress' satellite forts in Manila Bay also were attacked but that the enemy concentrated on the main fortification.

Skirmishing on Bataan

Along the entire front in Bataan there were sharp skirmishes between patrols, Lieut. Gen. Jonathan M. Wainwright also reported.

As yet, however, Japan's Gen. Yamashita has not attacked in force on the ground. He is evidently trying to "soften up" Corregidor—the backbone of the whole American-Filipino defense in Luzon. If these tactics are successful, and many of the fort's guns are silenced, he probably will hit the defenders with all he has.

Early in January, Yamashita's predecessor, Gen. Homma, tried similar tactics but failed. His bombers pounded Corregidor daily with as many as 60 planes at a time, but the American antiaircraft gunners made the attempt too costly.

Yesterday's attack, though involving slightly fewer planes than the earlier assaults, was probably heavier, military men here say, as the bombers used are newer, heavier craft and the raid lasted longer.

The bombardment was the third in as many days. Seven Jap planes have been shot down in this period.

Texts of the Army and Navy communiques follow:

Navy Communique No. 63

"Carribbean Area: The Navy Department issued the following communique today:

"The U. S. Coast Guard cutter Acacia was shelled and sunk, presumably by an enemy submarine, in the Caribbean area in March. The Acacia was a small unarmed ship of the tender class which was used to provide services to aids to navigation.

"All personnel aboard the Acacia were rescued and there were no casualties.

Army Communique No. 162

"1. Philippine Theater: The fortified islands at the entrance to Manila Bay were again subjected to heavy aerial bombardment by the enemy. Fifty-four heavy Japanese bombers participated in the attack which continued for six hours. Most of the bombing was concentrated on Corregidor. Damage to military installations was slight and our troops suffered only a few casualties. Four enemy planes were shot down by our antiaircraft artillery.

"In Bataan there were sharp skirmishes between patrols along the entire front.

"2. There is nothing to report from other areas."

On the northwest the Germans counterattacked three times but were reported repulsed with considerable casualties. In the south, a village changed hands several times, the Germans re-taking it at the end of the day by using tanks and superior numbers, but losing it again at night in a two-hour battle.

(German dispatches spoke of "the continuing thaw" in parts of the Russian battle front. They also disclosed a heavy Soviet attack on Gzhatsk, German spearhead garrison 100 miles west of Moscow, which the Russians have surrounded. The Germans said the attack was thrown back after hand-to-hand fighting. Repeated Red army attacks also were acknowledged in the Lake Ilmen sector, near Staraya Russa, and in the Donets Basin).

(The Moscow radio said the Red air force heavily bombed the remnants of the Sixteenth Nazi Army surrounded at Staraya Russa.)

Chinese Army Circled in Burma

ently Gen. Alexander is expecting the Japanese from Toungoo to turn west for a junction with the enemy force in the Irrawaddy Valley.

The position of the Chinese at Toungoo was called critical unless they can cut their way through the Japanese to the north or can be reinforced within two days.

On the third front, astride the northwest Thailand border, the Fifth and Sixth Chinese Armies routed 800 Japanese-Thai troops north of Mongtung, inflicting heavy casualties and capturing "a French officer," according to an earlier communique. This was the first official intimation of French cooperation—presumably from Japanese-dominated Indo-China—with hte enemy in Burma.

There have been numerous such patrol actions on this front. (One British dispatch from Chungking today said strong Chinese columns had entered Thailand at two points.)

Berkeley, Calif., March 26.—Eugene Meyer, editor and publisher of The Washington Post, was awarded an honorary doctor of laws degree by the University of California today and was described during the presentation as a "zealous and disinterested public servant under five successive Presidents."

Dr. Meyer was one of four persons receiving the honorary degree from the university as a part of its seventy-fourth annual Charter Day exercises.

Dr. Robert Gordon Sproul, president of the university, characterized Meyer as:

"Son of California and one-time student of this university; a newspaper publisher and banker with a social conscience, at ease in the overlapping fields of economics, finance, industry and agriculture.

"A zealous and disinterested public servant under five successive Presidents from Woodrow Wilson to Franklin Roosevelt, you have given cohesion, independence and definite purpose to national activities of prime importance; a hard fighter and a harder worker; blessed with the habit of success."

Dr. Meyer attended the university in 1892 and 1893 and received his degree from Yale University in 1895. He was escorted to the front of the platform to receive his doctor's degree by Dr. Ira B. Cross, professor of economics.

Bataan Defenders Thrilled By MacArthur's Transfer

By Dean Schedler
Associated Press Staff Writer

With the U. S. A. F. F. E. on Bataan Peninsula, March 20 (delayed). Word that their commander, Gen. Douglas MacArthur, had been made supreme Allied commander in the southwest Pacific area sent a great thrill through the embattled American and Philippine forces, who called it "the answer to our prayers."

The fighting spirit that has permeated these troops since the start of the war was unshaken by the immediate Japanese propaganda that their general had deserted Bataan in favor of other Pacific areas. The barometer of troop opinion of their commander skyrocketed and, although thousands of miles distant, they firmly believed their needs would be uppermost in General MacArthur's plans.

All Join Chorus of Praise

Buck privates and officers alike joined in the chorus of praise for the appointment. They commended MacArthur's choice of Lieut. Gen. Jonathan M. Wainwright to succeed him in the Philippines. Typical of the comment by officers was the statement of one that MacArthur's appointment was the "best break of the war so far."

Gen. Wainwright has the reputation of being the most front-going general around here.

I asked Gen. Wainwright for a statement on the new situation. He replied there was no change but that he had plans that would be effected gradually.

Japanese propagandists have been busy since announcement of MacArthur's departure.

"Forgotten soldiers of Bataan," the enemy radio has shouted day and night. Leaflets dropped by Japanese planes asserted MacArthur had deserted his men.

Believe Supplies Will Come

Nowhere, however, did I find any such feeling among the heroic defenders of Bataan.

Everywhere was the belief that their weeks of fighting against heavy odds was soon to be rewarded with new materials and new planes that would enable them to strike back savagely and force the enemy from these shores. More than ever, were they confident of victory.

News of the arrival in the United States of Francis B. Sayre, High Commissioner to the Philippines, likewise resulted in optimism. It was felt that his first-hand accounts of conditions on Bataan and at Corregidor could only result in good. Men here heard that Sayre had told the United States it must match the gallantry of Bataan's defenders with materials, not paper planning.

How Yank Troops Captured MacArthur in World War I

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Md., March 26.—Gen. Douglas MacArthur successfully ran the Japanese gantlet from Bataan to Australia, but he was captured in World War I—and by American troops.

The incident is recalled by Dr. Hugh Young, celebrated surgeon who served overseas, and head of the Brady Urological Institute at Johns Hopkins Hospital. He writes in his autobiography::

"At Buzancy I met the surgeon of the Forty-second Division, Col. Fairchild, who was greatly excited because he had had to evacuate two wounded members of Gen. MacArthur's staff who had been fired upon by a detachment of our own troops of the First Division.

"As the American armies rushed northward after the rapidly retreating Germans, Sedan was just in front of the Forty-second Division. To their left was the Fourth French Army.

"Owing to the historic significance of Sedan to every Frenchman, Marshal Foch had issued an order placing Sedan in the battle lines of the French and turning the American attack well to the right, so that Sedan would not fall to our troops.

"General Pershing though he had persuaded General Maistre, Fourth French Army, to offer no objection to American divisions taking Sedan if the French were not there to do it.

"The First Division was several miles to the right, but liberty to enter the race for the great prize—Sedan—was too much to be resisted. They turned and dashed across through the lines of the Seventy-seventh Division into the lines of the Forty-second, which had been stopped by Marshal Foch just before they entered Sedan.

"No restraining orders had been issued to the First Division, and on they rushed in the black of the night into the Forty-second. Encountering a group of men whom they supposed to be Germans, the men of the First Division fired upon this group, captured them and took them back. These men protested that they were American officers, but as they wore no insigna during battle, and Gen. MacArthur had a peculiar uniform and cap unlike any other American, the soldiers of the First laughed at him when he claimed to be commander of the Eighty-fourth Brigade.

"As none of the lieutenants or captains of the front line of the First Division recognized him, it was not until Gen. MacArthur was taken well back that he came across an officer who knew him."

U. S. Pilots Tell Of Fighting 100 Japs in Burma

By Darrell Berrigan
United Press Staff Writer

American Volunteer Group Headquarters, Central Burma, March 26.—American volunteer pilots today told how they took to the air last weekend against an overwhelming force of 100 Japanese bombers and fighters which attacked an A. V. G.-R. A. F. airport in Burma in three merciless waves.

The Japanese raids began Saturday afternoon and were believed to have been in retaliation for Allied attacks on Jap air fields in southern Burma, including a foray by two American pilots which wrecked at least 15 enemy planes at Moulmein.

"We had a short warning and were able to get up in the air," said Parker Dupouy, A. V. G. pilot from Seenonk, Mass. "I was with Bill Reed (William S. Reed, Marion, Ohio) when we met the Japs at 17,000 feet, with two cloud layers below us and another on top."

"We saw a group of 27 Japs above the third layer and we took after them. We saw seven of them peel off and concentrated on this bunch. My engine was working a little smoother than Bill's and I got there first."

Had to Dive Out

Dupouy said Reed had a bullet through his windshield and was splattered with shrapnel but not seriously hurt.

"But he was temporarily blinded and had to dive out of the fight. We were over the Toungoo Valley by this time. I poured lead into the belly of the Jap formation leader and he exploded right in my face. The other six Japs attacked me and one shot came in my cockpit. Small pieces of shrapnel got me in the leg and arm."

Dupouy then dived down close to the jungles, where the cloud shadows hid his Tomahawk, and managed to get away.

Other Americans who took part in the action included Cliff Grom, Chicago; Bob Prescott, Forth Worth, Tex., and Fred (Fearless Freddy) Hodges, of Memphis, Tenn.

They said an R. A. F. pilot blasted away at a Japanese plane directly over the airport and it caught fire and crashed on the edge of the field.

The R. A. F. pilot's motor conked and he made a forced landing on the field just as the second wave of Japanese bombers came over. He slid into a ditch just as "all Hell broke loose," the American fliers said.

Pilots Frank Swartz, Los Angeles; John Fauth, Mitchel Field, N. Y., and Ground Crewman W. R. Sieple also were crouching in one of the airdrome's "slit' trenches. When they attempted to move closer to a highway which was under attack a bomb caught them, killing Fauth and seriously wounding Swartz and Sieple.

Expected to Pull Through

Dr. Lewis Richards, of Kansas, of the A. V. G. Medical Staff, went onto the field and dragged off the two wounded men while the bombs still were falling. Japanese fighters attempted to strafe his car as he carried them to the hospital.

He attended Swartz and Sieple all night. Then they were flown to a Calcutta hospital and both are expected to pull through.

The two A. V. G. polits who raided Moulmein said they found Japanese planes "lined up for movie inspection" at two airdromes, and accordingly swept down to strafe them.

Their score, officially confirmed by British observers: Two Japanese transports, five bombers and eight fighters destroyed, ten other Japanese planes probably ruined.

The heroes were Reed and Kenneth Jernstedt, Yamhill, Oreg.

"A lot of them caught fire," Reed said. "Others just crumpled up. They were so full of holes they can never be used again."

Japan Appoints Special Minister To the Vatican

Tokyo (From Japanese Broadcasts), Friday, March 27 (AP).—Ken Harada, former counselor in the Japanese Embassy in Paris, has been appointed special minister to the Vatican, it was announced today by Tomokazu Hori, information board spokesman.

"Technically, this doesn't mean the opening of formal diplomatic relations," the spokesman said, "hiwever, it's de facto diplomatic relations."

Paolo Marella, apostolic delegate to Tonyo since 1937, will be given "full diplomatic privileges" here, it was said.

Hori said this was the first time that Japan had sent a diplomatic delegate to the Vatican.

philosophies the world has ever known. It embraces things that are right and condemns things that are wrong. Under its banner the free men of the world are united today.

"There can be no compromise; we shall win or we shall die, and to this end I pledge you the full resources of all the mighty power of my country and all the blood of my countrymen."

As he concluded with a toast to Australia and Australians, the assemblage of parliament members and government chiefs ended the hush with a spontaneous and tremendous ovation.

An orchestra struck up, "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow," and the crowd slowly broke up.

In the corridors on every hand there were such comments as "Great speech!" . . . "Splendid effort!" . . . "Short and to the point.!"

Many of the listeners were impressed by the notable simplicity of MacArthur's garb, its total absence of decoration despite the applauded announcement by United States Ambassador Nelson T. Johnson that MacArthur had been awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor, his country's highest tribute to valor.

As one said, "What I liked was that 3-and-6 suit he wore. Our blokes go around in 12-guinea outfits."

(Translated into American argot, the comparison would be, roughly, a dungaree suit to a tailor-made.)

Prior to the dinner, MacArthur visited the House during a warm debate and later shook hands with each member.

"If the rest of the Australians can fight as well as these can argue, the war is as good as won," he joked as he met the Speaker.

But the occasion was not all speeches and banqueting.

MacArthur spent two hours with the war cabinet.

Prime Minister John Curtin said they discussed "the composite structure and disposition of Allied forces in being and reinforcements required. The enemy's tactics and strategy were reviewed . . .

"The confidence and determination of Gen. MacArthur were manifest in all our deliberations. He gave us inspiration for the struggle and his direct and clear thinking in all that is involved in it impressed us deeply . . .

"News of what we have done and not news of what is intended is the only kind of news the war council can from now on make available."

While news of the actual fighting against the Japanese aggressor lagged, this authoritative Australian view of MacArthur's powers was supplied to the Australian Associated Press:

"There has been a feeling that many failures and disappointments in the immediate past have been caused by complicated, cumbrous military machinery, rendering quick decisions impossible.

"The government in discussion with MacArthur will tell him he has a free hand in all decisions relating to the conduct of the war in the Australian zone by Australian forces, with the understanding that, in the final stage of decision, full weight should be given to the commonwealth government's views as an equal partner with other Allied Nations concerned in the Pacific struggle.

"This does not mean any interference in any purely military decisions. There are stages when political and military considerations merge when the Government expects its voice to be heard as an equal partner. On all other occasions supreme control and direction will be vested in the supreme commander."

our own fault, or their own fault, or our own failure to use our combined strength . . . and to use the multiplying opportunities which, as the months pass, will present themselves to us."

He gave this word picture of the war and the task it sets:

"Its numerous and fearful problems reach down to the very foundations of human society. Its scope is world-wide and it involves all nations—every man, woman and child in them.

"Strategy and economics are interwoven. Sea, land and air are but a single service. The latest refinements of science are linked with the cruelty of the Stone Age.

"Workshop and fighting line are one. All may fall, all will stand, together. We must aid each other. We must stand by each other."

Yanks Destroy 14 Jap Planes

By the United Press

Sydney (Friday), March 27.—American pilots flying fast, new modern planes just arrived from the United States, have destroyed at least 14 Japanese planes in a battle over Lae, Japanese base in northeast New Guinea, a dispatch from Port Moresby said today.

The battle took place last Sunday but has "just been revealed," the dispatch said.

Twelve of the Japanese planes were shot down in the air and two were destroyed on the ground, the dispatch said, adding that the same fighters in other operations over New Guinea, attacked two Japanese heavy bombers which later were seen falling in flames.

Many of the United Nations pilots now in action over New Guinea previously served on other fronts and have seen service against the German Luftwaffe, the dispatch said. Their reputations, plus new, fast American fighter planes, have done much to bolster the morale of land forces in Port Moresby.

"Although there has been a lull in actual air clashes," the dispatch said, "R. A. A. F. planes are continuing widespread reconnaissance over all sections of New Britain and New Guinea which have been occupied by the Japanese."

On the land front, considerable forces of Japanese troops had been located in the Markham River valley but their advance had been halted at the village of Nadzab, 27 miles northeast of Lae, along the Markham River.

During the 18 days since their landings at Lae and Salamaua, northeast New Guinea, the Japanese have established a number of small airdromes and landing fields in the Markham Valley region.

A.E.F. Bests British In Irish War Games

England Bombed

Foe Hits Back For Big RAF Raid on Ruhr

By the United Press

London (Friday), March 27.—German bombers struck at a town on the northeast coast of England early today, continuing their violent feud with the R. A. F., which in the last 24 hours has made a tremendous attack on Germany's Ruhr Valley, blasted enemy shipping off Le Havre and shot down eight Nazi fighter planes over the English Channel.

A blaze of antiaircraft fire from the northeastern town appeared to have sent one German raider down into the sea in flames and was believed to have brought down another inland.

A break in the weather launched the spring air war into full fury. The R. A. F. paraded hundreds of bombers and fighters over central London in a display of might yesterday, and some of them later streaked off for France, continuing the round-the-clock campaign.

Wednesday night's attack on the Ruhr Valley was believed to have been the most terrific blow ever dealt by the R. A. F. Three hundred heavy new bombers made the raid en masse.

Eight Nazi Fighters Downed

It was announced that eight German fighter planes were shot down during the afternoon, at a cost of two Spitfire fighters which escorted the bombers on the LeHavre raid. (Berlin radio said that four British planes were brought down and two others probably destroyed in attempted attacks on LeHavre.)

London shook with the vibrations of the pounding motors as wing after wing of planes, most of them fighters flying in groups of 12, passed overhead, helping to celebrate London's "Warships Week." They were headed toward the south coast in the direction of France, and soon afterward heavy gunfire broke out over the Channel.

One report from Folkestone early today said a large force of bombers and fighters flew southwest from there toward the French coast below Letouquet. Distant heavy gunfire was heard.

Leaflets Dropped on Paris

(Vichy radio said the R. A. F. dropped pamphlets over Paris on Wednesday night, from 11 p. m. to 12:30 a. m., warning workers in armament factories that "We bombed Renault (the Renault automobile works which turns out trucks for Germany) and we are coming back to get the others." The dispatch said no bombs were dropped, but that antiaircraft guns were particularly active.)

Indicative of the size of Wednesday night's raid was the fact that 11 bombers failed to return—the heaviest loss in some weeks. The mission was fourfold and, thanks to a sudden break in fogs which have kept the R. A. F. grounded at nights lately, it was carried out in bright moonlight.

Malta Downs 50 Raiders Since March 1

By the Associated Press

Valletta, Malta (Friday), March 27.—Germany's attempt to knock out this British island steping-stone to Africa has cost the Axis 50 planes since March 1, but the Nazi airmen kept pounding away with bombs all day yesterday and on into the night.

This bastion with its strong raid shelters dug deep out of solid rock continues to keep the Axis from having great freedom in ferrying troops and supplies from nearby Sicily across to Africa for the expected Nazi spring offensive.

Last weekend it was bolstered still more when a light British naval squadron fought off a heavy Italian contingent, including a battleship, and brought a convoy of needed supplies into port almost intact.

The toll of 50 airplanes downed for March, however, does not tell the complete story. Many other Axis airmen undoubtedly failed to regain their bases after savage dogfights with the R. A. F. The 50 tally represents only those planes actually seen crashing into the sea.

The roar of antiaircraft and the bursting of bombs continued last night while the British issued their regular communique.

The communique, describing the assault as being as intense as that made upon the aircraft carrier Illustrious more than a year ago, said that R. A. F. fighters swarmed up to meet the attackers and destroyed four bombers, probably destroyed another and damaged at least four.

Some civilian damage was done and a few civilians were killed and wounded, last night's communique said, concluding significantly, "a raid is still in progress."

(Berlin said the bombing of military objectives at Malta "continued most effectively Wednesday night and Thursday," with targets set on fire, hits scored on harbor installations at Valletta and fuel depots and docks seriously damaged. A cruiser in the harbor was said by Berlin to have been hit by two heavy bombs.)

An official compilation stated that 312 persons have been killed by German air raids on Malta since December 1.

Yanks Gain Difficult Objective as 'Foe' In Battle Exercise

By Rice Yahner
Associated Press Staff Writer

With United States Troops in Northern Ireland, March 26.—United States and British troops ended their first battle practice today after the Americans had enacted the "enemy" role for a 72-hour problem executed under conditions just short of what might be expected in actual combat.

In a midnight counterattack midwestern infantrymen gained a difficult objective against seasoned British soldiers, many of them veterans of the Belgian campaign of 1940. A surprise stab by the United States force while the British protected their flank netted 150 prisoners.

By their performance during the three-day exercise which the British call a "scheme" the United States soldiers won the praise of Lieut. Gen. H. E. Franklin, commander of British forces in Northern Ireland; Maj. Gen. Russell P. Hartle, their own commander in this area, and Maj. Alphe Young, of Sioux City, Iowa, who headed the troops in the field.

Infantry and artillery, with supply and signal troops, moved into the British tactical plan as a complete unit. Thus, for the first time U. S. troops actually functioned with a British command.

This problem was only a preliminary to more extensive maneuvers in the Americans' schedule of constant, intensive training.

Soon they will undergo actual fire, with infantrymen advancing under a live artillery barrage. Every precaution will be taken in an operation in which all gunners will fire over the troops and every soldier will learn to know the sound and observe closely the effect of the shells. They also will get experience in rifle and machine-gun fire.

Field officers said the exercise just completed showed the U. S. soldiers still do not take cover quickly enough in realistic maneuvers.

Freighter Rams And Sinks Sub

Henderson was in his bunk when the attack came. He left the ship in a lifeboat with 19 others. The boat shipped so much water it became unmaneuverable, the boatswain related, and two hours later he jumped overboard and swam back to his ship.

From the sinking merchantman Henderson saw other ships, he said, but he wasn't certain of their identity and believed they might be enemy submersibles surfacing.

"When I knew who I was talking to and saw that the rescue ships couldn't get any closer," he said, "I put up the flag and jumped overboard and swam out to the nearest ship."

Able Seaman Bryan Lloyd, of Houston, Tex., told how he also left the lifeboat containing 20 men, swam back to the ship and lowered a raft.

"As soon as I got away from the ship," he said, "I hauled up a yellow flag so that anyone around me in the water could see it and could climb on."

Loss in Indian Ocean

New York, March 26 (AP).—The torpedo-sinking of an American freighter by a Japanese submarine only 10 miles off Madras, India, last January 29 was revealed today by the Third Naval District.

The crew of 38 rowed ashore and 23 survivors headed by Capt. Thomas Eckhart arrived here March 23.

Naval officers said the ship was about an hour out of Madras when the first torpedo hit. A second torpedo struck and the vessel sank in 25 minutes.

Marine circles in New York reported the loss February 5, but naval officials declined comment at the time.

Madras, situated on the Bay of Bengal, is along the Allied supply line to Calcutta and the Burma Road. The sinking was the farthest point west that Japanese submarines are known to have penetrated.

Brazilian Arms Plant Blast Kills 1

Rio de Janeiro, March 26 (AP).—An explosion in a Sao Paulo explosives factory making munitions for the Brazilian army killed one man and injured many others today, dispatches from Sao Paulo reported. Six of the injured were not expected to recover.

U. S. and Vichy Avoid Rupture Over Axis Aid

French supplies in North Africa.

After stern warnings by the United States, Vichy promised that no further gasoline will be given Axis forces in North Africa and that no more food or trucks will be given to the Italian forces in Libya.

Meanwhile, it was disclosed that the American Ambassador to Vichy—Admiral William D. Leahy—will not be called back to Washington, as frequently reported.

It was pointed out that relations between Leahy and French Chief of State Marshal Petain are extremely close, and that it was considered extremely important the United States maintain in Vichy someone who might stiffen Petain against outright French collaboration with Germany.

Settlement of long-standing issues between the two governments followed frequent consultations in Vichy between Leahy and Petain, on the one hand, and between Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles and French Ambassador Gaston Henry-Haye in Washington.

Reliable quarters said the accord may result in resumption of food, fuel and clothing shipments from the United States to North Africa. Such shipments were suspended several months ago after it was found Vichy had been aiding Axis forces in Africa against the British.

Other points at issue grew out of transfer of the Dunquerque to continental France, a move which was feared as a possible prelude to French naval cooperation with Germany; the action of a German submarine in putting a wounded sailor ashore on the French Caribbean island of Martinique; and the St. Pierre-Miquelon dispute growing out of the Christmas Day coup by Free French forces.

Essentially, the United States was concerned chiefly with seeing that the French fleet did not fall into enemy hands and that the Axis did not obtain the use of strategic French colonial bases—such as Dakar in West Africa.

Vichy recently had reaffirmed its neutrality.

Flier Who Hit Kongo Is Honored

Melbourne (Friday), March 27 (U.P.).—Lieut. Comdr. J. V. Peterson, U. S. Navy flier, of Omaha, Neb., has been recommended officially for the Distinguished Flying Cross for leading the squadron which successfully bombed a 27,000-ton Japanese battleship of the Kongo class off Luzon soon after the outbreak of the Pacific war, it was announced today.

Peterson later commanded reconnaissance groups of Catalinas operating from the Netherlands islands of Celebes or Java, which faced great perils in patroling at slow speeds over enemy invasion fleets in Macassa Strait and off Balik Papan.

The reconnaissance made possible a night attack on Balik Papan and also revealed the approach of the enemy fleet before the Java Sea battle.

Some of the big Catalina flying boats daily flew the 550 miles from Soerabaja to Balik Papan and frequently returned shot full of holes, but with valuable information.

Ahalt, who was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., in 1918, is a member of Squadron 150 of the Royal Canadian Air Force. He enlisted in 1940, trained under the Canadian joint air training plan, and was commissioned in April, 1941.

Stricter Censorship

He said this action was being taken in response to concern in some quarters over allegedly "irresponsible and exaggerated messages" sent from London in recent weeks.

Adm. King Sees Long War And Victory

Admiral Ernest J. King assumed greater authority than any other naval commander in American history yesterday with the declaration that the road to victory will be "tough."

He was sworn in as Chief of Naval Operations by Read Admiral W. B. Woodson, Navy judge advocate general, in the presence of Secretary Knox and other ranking naval chiefs. King already is commander in chief of the United States Fleet and will hold both jobs.

"This will be a long and hard war," King declared. "The going will be tough—how tough many of us already have cause to realize.

"It is high time to stop talking defense—and above all to stop thinking defense. We must expect to take some hard blows in order to give even harder blows—just as a fighter does in the ring.

"We must strike the enemy when and where we can—and keep on striking him heavier blows as mounting production puts into our hands more and more tools of war.

"Our days of victories are in the making—we will win this war."

Bottles, Not Arms, Went to Indies, OEM Man Says

Boston, March 26 (Wide World).—One of the last ships to reach the Netherlands East Indies port of Sourabaya carried thousands of empty beer bottles although arms for the Allies were needed there, Wayne Coy, liaison officer for the President's Office of Emergency Management, declared in an article in the April issue of the Atlantic Monthly, published today.

Coy mentioned the shipment as an example of the kind of bureaucracy which has slowed down the war effort in the United States.

"Overall improvement is needed or we shall have the most energetic industry, the most cooperative trade unions, the most alert press, the best bankers and lawyers and doctors and public generally that ever lost a war," he wrote.

The article is titled "Teamwork in Washington: Conversion to War." "This great working force of Government must be lifted out of the workaday habits of peacetime bureaucracy," the writer continued.

A large part of the company's operations are being devoted to war production.

Gish said it was quite possible that something dropped on the explosive from an airplane which he was informed flew over the quarry just before the blast. Coroner David F. Bachman theorized the dynamite might have been touched off as it was being placed in holes by the workmen.

"Bodies were scattered around for an eighth of a mile," said William Miller, 38, fire chief from nearby Nazareth and one of the first officials to reach the scene.

"I saw a leg here or an arm there. They were terribly mangled. I found several children were hit by flying glass but none of them was injured seriously."

Seventy children in the Lehigh Consolidated School half a mile away were just beginning classes when the explosion occurred. All windows in the two-room building were broken. Although a dozen pupils and both teachers were injured, only two children were detained at a hospital.

3500 to 4000 Service Men AreExpected To Go Bedless in Capital Over This Weekend

Between 3500 and 4000 service men who visit Washington this weekend will be without beds unless quarters are provided by tomorrow, Hugo Wolter, director of Recreational Services, Inc., declared yesterday.

The total number of beds reported to Wolter's office as being available yesterday was about 1200—approximately 500 furnished by the Y. M. C. A., the Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Club and the recreational center at 306 Ninth Street Northwest, and the 650 offered to visiting service men by the Army and the United States Coast Guard Auxiliary this week as a result of the Post's revelation of the great shortage of sleeping facilities in Washington.

Commenting upon the great need still remaining, Wolter said that he had exhausted every possible source in Washington for additional beds and that the only solution to the problem now is the allocation of sufficient funds by the Federal Security Agency so that suitable quarters can be built.

Summing up the situation, Wolter said, "he principal holdup in our program ever since its start has been the lack of money. Our present budget will not permit the purchase of additional quarters or beds. Unless the Federal Security Agency will supply the money, the soldiers, sailors and marines must continue using the Union Station, bus stations and the parks for dormitories."

When asked yesterday if the FSA would supply the money for barracks Wolter claims are necessary, Mark MacCloskey, recreation director of the FSA, questioned the accuracy of Wolter's estimate of about 4000 bedless service men. Maintaining the Wolter5s guess was extravagant, MacCloskey said:

"The real test of how many beds are needed will come Saturday night when we see how many of the cots made available by the Army at the Arlington Cantonement are used."

If all the beds in the cantonment are used and soldiers are still sleeping on improvised beds in public places, and Wolter can support his estimate with some sort of figures, the FSA will "certify immediately any request for the construction of barracks," MacCloskey added.

Wolter stated that his estimate of 5000 visiting service men varied each week, but that as an average it was based on reports he had received from welfare agencies, churches and civic associations engaged in the entertainment of soldiers visiting Washington each weekend.

Cairo, March 26 (AP).—A British submarine commander whose craft's outer casing was penetrated by two bombs in a recent action brought the ship home safely, it was disclosed today.

The submarine sighted an Italian merchant vessel whose heavy escort of warships and planes indicated she was carrying an important cargo. The undersea boat launched three torpedoes at the merchantman and hit her but did not wait to see whether she sank.

Production Men To Make Arms Loan

Patterson Says President's Order Will Speed Output, By-Pass 'Banker Caution'

Answering complaints that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation had been unwilling to make working capital loans to small businesses in war production, President Roosevelt yesterday signed an Executive order authorizing the Army, Navy and Maritime Commission to make direct loans or to underwrite other credit agencies financing war contracts.

In a statement accompanying the order, giving new hope to small firms hitherto unable to borrow money for their arms work, the President made clear that from now on production men rather than bankers would approve applications from large as well as small war contractors for funds to carry out expanded war manufacture.

Move Urged by Nelson

The order permits the three military procurement agencies either to loan money directly from their own appropriations, or to guarantee other credit institutions against loss in loaning to concerns with war orders. It was indicated that the bulk of the credit would be extended through Federal Reserve district bank channels, with the loans underwritten by the three buying departments.

The order, it was learned, was issued at the instigation of War Production Boss Donald M. Nelson, Undersecretaries of War and Navy Patterson and Forrestal and Maritime Commission Chairman Land, after extensive agitation by field procurement officers for remedial measures to the RFC's "banker caution." The contracting officers had complained that small businesses had been unable to obtain funds for processing their orders from either Government or private credit agencies.

"Banker's Viewpoint" Ignored

Patterson explained to reporters after the order was signed yesterday that the loan duties assigned to the three agencies could have been performed by the RFC, but for the fact that some of the small firms might suffer losses and thus impair the record of that agency, which "has to keep an eye on the balance sheet."

If the loans "turn sour," Patterson said, "the War Department ultimately would get the bill. At the end of the war we may find ourselves with some money on the string, but in the meantime we will be getting our tanks and guns and planes."

"However this may appear from a banker's viewpoint, it is very sound from a production viewpoint. And we are putting this on a production basis."

The President's statement made it clear that peacetime credit restrictions now are relaxed for the duration of the war.

"The basic purpose of the order," he said, is to put working capital on a war basis. Up to now peacetime restrictions on banks and credit agencies have made it difficult for them to finance war production although the banks have been anxious to use their resources for prosecution of the war.

"Aimed at Curing a Situation"

"Under the order, the War Department, the Navy Department and the Maritime Commission may guarantee or make loans when they are needed for war production. These guarantees will support the operations of the banks, the Federal Reserve System, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and other credit agencies.

"They will not be made under peacetime credit rules. They will be made by production men, wherever additional financing is essential for additional production. Peacetime restrictions on credits cannot hold up production of war supplies needed by the armed forces.

"The Executive order authorizing the financing of contracts to facilitate the prosecution of the war is aimed at curing a situation which has interfered with the all-out participation of many small business enterprises in war production."

The President made a ceremony of signing the order. Present were Patterson, Forrestal, Land and Senators Arthur Capper (Republican), of Kansas; James M. Mead (Democrat), of New York, and James Murray (Democrat), of Montana. Mr. Roosevelt used three pens in affixing his signature and gave one to each of the three Senators.

War Department Backs Up Cupid

envy stated that "history, especially in wartime, repeats itself."

From the morale branch, traditionally in charge of the welfare and recreation of soldiers, came a mass shrug of the shuolders and a chorused "Why not?"

If the A. E. F. in Australia finds that the daughters of the Southern Cross are the dream girls they've been looking for all their lives and the kind they'd like to take home to mother, the morale branch can see no reason why anyone should interrupt the ceremony.

"We can see no threat to Army morale in marriage," said Col. Munson. "As a matter of fact I can't see anything less than praiseworthy in the A. E. F.'s hearty cooperation with the United Nations' hope for fusion of the allied countries."

In answer to the dictum of Brisbane's Catholic archbishop that "these men did not come to Australia to marry; they came to fight," the War Department said, with a grin, that perhaps the two are "compatible."

Romantic soldiers, from privates to generals, the War Department reminded, are free to marry providing they abide by the rules and regulations set forth by their commanding officer. In the case of the Australian A. E. F., Commanding General Douglas MacArthur, the "Lion of Luzon," has said okay, if "there is no just impediment"—such as a wife at home.

Chief Chaplain William R. Arnold said the Army had no spiritual or moral objections to a soldier marrying, providing Army restrictions were observed "and the soldier observed the canons of his religion regarding marriage."

Asked if he had reports of any spectacular number of marriages in the A. E. F. to Australian girls, the chaplain said with a smile: "Sounds to me as if the boys might be doing a little bragging. I haven't had any such reports from there."

Customarily, the chief chaplain explained, both soldiers and commissioned officers are married by the chaplain of their outfit and all "such unions" are reported to him.

"Thus far," he continued, "I'd say the reports coming in from the expeditionary forces were very dull reading. Not much in the way of either color or romance."

It was possible, he admitted, that the boys were being married by Australian parsons.

Since early February, according to reports, Australia has been confronted with the blushing proof that American soldiers love Australian girls, and the girls are all for it. More than 20 marriages have been reported in one city alone.

The War Department office of chaplains, with a twinkle, predicted: "In the post-war world we will be just one big family, so, surely there can be no harm in our soldiers beginning to think along these lines while still fighting for the victory."

"Friendly infiltration," opined the military strategists. "We ought to give 'em medals."

said Danny pointed to other children in the room and said, "She did hit me, didn't she?"

Miss Davis said there was a chorus of "Noes" from the other pupils, and that Danny replied, "Aw, she did, too."

With that Mrs. Leslie advanced toward her, the teachere said, and began striking her with the belt. The first two blows struck the side of her body and seven others struck her on the bare arm.

Miss Davis described the blows as being "very hard" as she demonstrated the overhand motion which she said Mrs. Leslie used in swinging the strap.

"My arm was badly bruised and was bleeding in three places," she testified.

Miss Davis said she made no attempt to fight back. She said she was forced to remain away from school for several days.

On cross-examination, Miss Davis said she is working for her master's degree in psychology at Purdue University and expressed the opinion she was "more competent than the ordinary person to diagnose sanity."

A plea of temporary insanity has been entered for Mrs. Leslie.

"Mrs. Leslie was engaged in a purposeful activity," Miss Davis said. "She knew what she was doing."

Earlier prosecution witnesses, including nine of the children in Danny's schoolroom, related how Leslie stood guard at the door while his wife flogged the teacher.

Pepper Offers Plan for Total Mobilization

fense and total mobilization," he said.

"The American Congress today stands lower in the estimation of the American people than in any other period in my memory. The people are asking: 'Is Congress fully alert to the danger?'"

His speech, which brought a defense of the war record of Congress by Senators O'Mahoney of Wyoming and Lucas of Illinois, proposed:

Universal man power mobilization, so that "every man and woman may be best trained and placed to win the war in the shortest possible time and with the least loss of lives and money."

Abolition of all legal restrictions on hours of labor during the war. He said it wasn't a question of overtime or whether war plants were actually working far over 40 hours, but one of removing all legal restrictions that might even in a small way retard production.

Creation of a tribunal authorized to fix hours of labor, wages, salaries, profits, prices and bonuses. This agency would give "first consideration to the effective prosecution of the war." Questions of rights of one group or individual over another should come second, he said.

Would Ban Fees

A prohibition on payment or receipt of any entrance fee as a condition precedent to war work.

Power for the President to acquire or take control of any factory, mine or facility, and to direct the kind of work performed by any factory or facility in the war effort.

Creation of two agencies, headed by men of Cabinet rank, one charged with mobilization of man power, and the other, with protection of civilian life behind the lines.

Surveys by competent agencies on the extent to which underprivilege and subnormal conditions exist in regard to health, education and economic opportunity, and remedial action by Congress.

Pepper headed his list with a recommendation that Congress correlate its own many war activities and investigations by creation of a special joint war committee which would keep closely in touch with the President and Government agencies. He pointed, for example, to the tremendous time waste involved in Production Chief Donald Nelson's frequent summons to appear before different Congressional committees.

O'Mahoney denied any attack on Congress is "justified by the facts." He said Congress has done everything it was called on to do in prosecuting the war and has been "ahead of the Executive."

"I'm of the opinion that the people of the country are six months ahead of Washington, but the charge of failure cannot lie at the door of Congress," he said.

Call For United Purpose

Both O'Mahoney and Lucas called for cessation of hostilities between special groups in the interest of unity. Lucas said that "instead of striking at one another it is high time we started swearing a little more at Hitler, his scavenger Mussolini and the treacherous Japs."

Before the House Naval Committee Green and Murray renewed labor's pledge not to strike and reminded committee members of their voluntary surrender of claims to double-time pay for Saturday, Sunday and holiday work as such.

"There is going to be no strike over the closed shop, union shop or any other issue," Murray said. He assured the committee he would stop "slowdowns" if they occur in any plant under his jurisdiction.

Said Green:

"I say to you publicly that I disavow any strikes of any kind by any A. F. of L. union for the duration."

Chairman Vinson told both they were entitled to "public thanks" for relinquishing labor's right to strike and giving up double time pay for special days. Vinson advised leaders he will no bill ready before the middle of April.

Prober Asks Firing of 4 in 'Slow-Down'

By the Associated Press

With the approval of a C. I. O. union, William E. Baldwin, a special investigator for the Labor Board, yesterday recommended that four C. I. O. stewards employed by the Cleveland plant of the Aluminum Co. of America be discharged for instigating a slow-down in the plant.

Officials of the C. I. O. National Association of Die Casting Workers said they were supporting the Government decision "because we are interested in production."

The real cause of the slow-down, union officials charged, was the action of the company in instituting new work procedures without consulting the union. However, they stressed the need for "all-out production for victory."

The plant employs about 260 persons.

The names of the shop stewards whose discharges were recommended were not disclosed. The union's statement was signed by Edward T. Cheyfitz, national executive secretary; Alex Balint, regional director; Pete Zvara, national representative; Frank Grady, president, and Edward Radden, recording secretary, both of local 55.

In another development in the labor field, a strike of loomfixers and other key workers had closed four cloth manufacturing plants in Fall River, Mass., yesterday and 12,000 textile operatives were idle. The War Labor Board announced it would send an urgent message to the workers today, apparently a request to return to work.

The walkout was precipitated when the National Labor Relations Board rejected a petition by an independent union, the American Federation of Textile Operatives, to organize the mills on a craft rather than an industrial basis.

At Kearny, N. J., a proposed strike at the vast Western Electric Co. plant was canceled when a dispute over wages was certified to the War Labor Board.

Rail Strike Trio Guilty of Contempt

By the Associated Press

Peoria, Ill., March 26.—Two former employes of the Toledo, Peoria & Western Railroad and a union press agent today were convicted by a Federal court jury on contempt of court charges stemming from alleged violation of a Federal court injunction. Operation of the strike-bound road was taken over this week by the Government.

The jury deliberated less than a half hour before returning its verdict to Judge J. Leroy Dair. Those convicted were Paul Brokaw, Cleveland, press agent for the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, H. J. Dilley and Delmar G. Newdigate, former employes of the road.

Sentence was not immediately imposed.

All three of the defendants, as well as their counsel, were absent from the courtroom when the jury's verdict was read. Judge Adair announced that he would entertain defense motions for a new trial tomorrow and would continue the defendants' bond until that time. He did not indicate when sentence would be imposed. The sentence on the contempt charge is at the court's discretion.

Judge Adair announced two other former employes of the road, also charged with violating the injunction, would go on trial on April 13. They are Hustler Wilson and Frank W. Luces, two of the 104 employes of the road who went on strike last December 28.

William Wheeler, 42, a witness for the railroad, testified yesterday that an alleged plot to dynamite a railroad bridge during the recent strike on the line had been frustrated by information he gave to the road's attorney and a Peoria business official.

Body to Rule Labor for War To Be Formed

President Roosevelt has decided to set up the long-projected National Manpower Board within the framework of the War Production Board, thus scotching the hopes of Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt and of Labor Secretary Frances Perkins for heading the agency, it was reported by reliable Administration sources last night.

The decision is expected to be followed by an Executive order creating the body next week and endowing it was policy-making functions in the fields of war labor supply, training and labor priorities.

The President was said to be undecided on who would be made chairman of the powerful agency. He is reported to be considering Supreme Court Justices William O. Douglas and James F. Byrnes, Railroad Retirement Board Chairman Murray Latimer, Social Security Board Chairman Arthur Altmeyer, Thomas Murray, New York City engineer, and Sidney Hillman, WPB labor division chief.

Originally McNutt's Idea

If Hillman is not made the chairman of the board, it was believed, he will be its administrative director.

Proposals for such a body originated almost two months ago with McNutt, and were followed by several drafts of orders. These have been stalled in the Budget Bureau and on the President's desk for several weeks while a controversy raged over where the new agency should be placed.

Both the American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organizations have indorsed the creation of a man-power board, but have urged that it be established in the Department of Labor.

The proposal accepted by the President, it was said, would establish the United States Employment Service as the sole agency through which war factories would hire their workers. Policy for the USES would be set by the man-power agency.

Would Control Transfers

The Man Power Board would also be given centralized control over several different agencies and departments now concerned with war-labor training. It would set up relative priorities of various war industries to determine which had first call on workers in a labor-scarcity situation.

Another function would be the transfer of workers among different employers according to the war program's needs.

The board would also set up regulations needed to prevent the induction into the armed services of workers more useful as skilled artisans in armament industries. It would advise on problems of housing, vacations, staggering shifts, transportation of workers and curtailment of production to free skilled employes for more vital munitions operations.

The projected order was said to entail a more drastic and complete governmental authority over labor than has ever been experienced in American history.

in one of the most controversial political situations in the Capital. REA, as a New Deal symbol, has long been supported by powerful farm and Congressional blocs and, although vigorously opposed by private utilities during its stormy life, it had so far successfully opposed all challenges.

In this case, it was reported, REA made no objection to Nelson's decision. Although the agency had urged to be allowed continued operations, it indicated that it would abide by any WPB determination without question.

properly to handle. That related to unethical and captious practices by some attorneys in that court. Under the new system such practice can now be effectively regulated."

Wood emphasized that the cost involved in setting up the new courts swill swiftly be liquidated by the receipts from their operations.

Principal Points Indorsed

The main points of the enacted measure have all been indorsed in principle by the local bar. In addition to the form of the new courts, they include:

1. Appointment of a presiding judge of the new Municipal Court with full administrative power to make assignment of cases and supervise generally the affairs of the court.

2. Enlargement of the financial jurisdiction of the Municipal Court from $1000 to $3000, thus relieving the overworked United States District Court of many cases.

3. The grant of power to the pre-trial judge of the United States District Court to certify cases from that court to the Municipal Court for trial when he concludes the case is in Municipal Court jurisdiction.

4. The grant of power to the Municipal Court to censure, suspend and disbar attorneys found guilty of unethical practices.

5. Empo erment of the Municipal Court of Appeals, as a matter of right rather than discretion, to hear appeals from orders and judgments of the consolidated Municipal Court.

The original bill was introduced simultaneously last May by Chairman Randolph, of the House District Committee, and Chairman McCarran, of the Senate District Committee. Following hearings before the District Judiciary Subcommittee under the chairmanship of Representative McGehee (Democrat), of Mississippi, it was passed by the House with minor modifications.

Under the direction of Senator McCarran, three revisions of the bill were made in the Senate District Committee and the bill "streamlined" with the advice of the local bench and bar.

Both Houses accepted the conferees' report providing that all three judges of the Appellate Court and eight of the ten judges of the lower bench must be residents of the District. All the judges must have practiced law in the District for at least five years.

Regional Offices Expected to Speed Work of War Output

By the Associated Press

A network of 13 "little WPB's" will be established throughout the country, the War Production Board announced yesterday as part of a program to decentralize authority and speed up WPB work in the field.

"Our plan is to place as much authority as possible for War Production Board operations in these new regional offices," J. S. Knowlson, director of industry operations, explained. "Determination of policy and programs will rest . . . in Washington. But, as time goes on, it is expected that more and more WPB activities will be actually directed in the field, in accordance with overall WPB policy."

Kanzler Chief at Detroit

Under the projected set-up supervision over the existing 120 field offices will be distributed among the 13 regional agencies. The latter will be established in Philadelphia, Detroit, Cleveland, Atlanta, Boston, Chicago, Dallas, Denver, Kansas City, Minneapolis, New York, San Francisco and Seattle.

Knowlson announced that Ernest Kanzler, chief of the WPB automotive branch and "czar" of the automobile conversion program, would be in charge of the Detroit region. Orville H. Bullitt, Pennsylvania State director of contract distribution, will become regional director in Philadelphia, and John C. Virden, formerly board chairman of the John C. Virden Co., of Cleveland, will head the Cleveland office. No other appointments were immediately announced.

Explaining that "we want to bring WPB service close to home for both manufacturers and the various District procurement officials," Knowlson said special representatives of various WPB branches in Washington would be assigned to field work wherever a concentration of a particular industry or some specialized problem justifies their assignment.

"We believe the increased effectiveness of our field organization . . . will save much time and expense for businessmen, because they will be able to get more of the answers nearby and not have to come to Washington," Knowlson continued.

"In selecting regional directors, we are picking only men who have a firm grasp of war production problems in the areas to which they are to be assigned, broad management experience and sound judgment."

Hearing Set On O'Connor, Hill Charges

An open court hearing is scheduled next Thursday on differences between Representative Hamilton Fish's former secretary, George Hill, and John J. O'Connor, the lawyer Hill has blamed for his failure to disavow the perjuries which caused him to be sent to the penitentiary.

O'Connor was summoned as a witness as he was leaving for New York yesterday.

After retaining other counsel, Hill testified about his work for the German agent, George Sylvester Viereck, who is now in jail. His new lawyer, Richard A. Harman, then asked that Hill's prison term be reduced.

Joining his plea, O'Connor took occasion to deny what Hill said about him, making some statements about his former client. Hill now asks that O'Connor swear to the statements or that they be stricken out of the record. Justice F. Dickinson Letts set next Thursday for evidence and argument on this request.

Esso Held Up Buna for U.S., Arnold Says

were fined $5000 each in Newark, were present in the caucus room of the Senate Office Building yesterday when Arnold gave his sensational account of the "marriage" of Standard Oil and I. G. Farben.

These were Walter C. Teagle, chairman of the board of Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey; W. S. Farish, president of the company, and Frank A. Howard, vice president of one of its subsidiaries.

Arnold said Standard's cartel arrangement with Germany was 'the principal cause of our present shortage of synthetic rubber." He absolved Standard of any unpatriotic motives, saying:

"These arrangements were not entered into with any desire to aid or assist Germany. The sole motive was an attempt on the part of Standard Oil to get a protected market and to eliminate independent competition, and finally to restrict production in world markets in order to maintain that control."

Backed by Documents

Arnold backed up every statement with a document—a letter, a copy of minutes, or other memoranda obtained by his staff of Department of Justice investigators.

Senator Homer Bone (Democrat), of Washington, asked Arnold whether Standard relaxed its restrictions on synthetic rubber development in the United States after Hitler came to power.

"On the contrary," said Arnold, "it intensified them."

"There's a man who wrote a book called 'You Can't Do Business With Hitler.'" Senator Bone observed. "It seems that some of our nationals could."

Hugh Fulton, counsel for the committee, popularly called the Truman Committee, was particularly interested in what Arnold had to say about butyl, the rubber substitute discovered by Standard Oil's own chemists. When Arnold told how Standard passed on full information about butyl to the I. G. Farben Co., Fulton interrupted.

"Does this mean," he asked, "that we developed in this country a cheaper synthetic rubber made from materials that were more plentiful, and that we turned it over to Germany?"

"That's right," said Arnold.

"And they refused to turn it over to American companies?"

"That's right."

Arnold said that butyl rubber had been found to be "quite promising" for inner tubes and that "apparently" it could be used to make an over-all tire. No natural rubber was necessary for the carcass, he said.

He said that isobutylene, from which butyl is made, cost about one-eighth as much as Standard Oil's price for butadiene, the basic raw material for buna, and was available in larger quantities.

The cost of butyl, he testified, was between 7 and 15 cents per pound, compared with approximately 20 cents per pound for natural rubber.

Telling how Standard turned butyl over to its German associate, Arnold said:

"As a consequence, while the Hitler Government, for military reasons, was refusing to make available to this country the German buna rubber, Standard sent I. G. Farben information as to the American butyl rubber and Standard's files show that a recommendation was made that 50 pounds of sample butyl should be sent to I. G. Farben.

"Thus, full information was sent to I. G. Farben in 1938, but in 1939 Standard failed to disclose full information as to butyl rubber to a representative of our own Navy's Bureau of Construction and Repair."

Arnold, quoting from a letter, told how a Mr. Werkenthin of the Navy's Bureau of Constfuction and Repair in this city visited a Standard plant at Bayway in 1939 "to get some first-hand information on the compounding and general handling of these synthetic rubbers."

The Standard Oil official who wrote the letter went on to say:

"Mr. Werkenthin was particularly interested in ascertaining how far we had proceeded in the development of butyl rubber. . . . Because of the possible application of butyl rubber to some of the Navy's requirements, Mr. Werkenthin had been instructed also to look into the manufacturing process.

"You will recall that I took up this question with you before his arrival. As agreed upon, I took Mr. Werkenthin over to see the 'K' plant when it appeared that I could not very well steer his interest away from the process.

"However, I am quite certain that he left with no picture of the operations other than that a considerable amount of distillation and refrigeration is involved in the handling of the light hydrocarbons, and that refinery gas rather than straight butadiene is the raw material."

Assistant Attorney General Arnold said that Standard, with the exception of testing arrangements with two rubber companies and some specialty users, had held back use of butyl rubber, "even in this time of rubber shortage." Only the Newark consent decree, he said, made its use available.

"It is difficult for one to explain this holding back in view of the reports in Standard's own files concerning the good qualities of butyl rubber," he said.

He added, however, that "tremendous pressure" had been exerted on Standard by various companies which did not wish to retard the development of synthetic rubber but nevertheless wished to make sure that they were given priority in its development.

At this point the name of Philip Reed, who is a division chief in the War Production Board, was brought into the picture.

Arnold read a letter signed by Frank A. Howard, and dated July 24, 1940, which mentioned Reed in his role as chairman of General Electric. Reed had accepted an agreement with Standard with respect to butyl samples, but the Firestone company apparently was well ahead of him.

Howard wrote:

"Mr. Reed pointed out that Firestone had a three-month head start over the industry in general, whereas General Electric would have only about six or seven weeks, if we actually release samples broadcast on September 15. I told him that I did not know what we would actually do in this connection. Pressure might require us to deliver the samples broadcast as early as September 15, but if we had our own way, we would probably delay general distribution still further . . ."

Arnold was asked why Reed wanted a six or seven-week lead. He replied that the document spoke for itself. In response to another question, Arnold said that Reed had not been asked to explain.

Will Get Chance

"The committee will give him a chance to explain," Chairman Truman said, amid laughter.

In his opening statement to the committee, Arnold said that the shortage of synthetic rubber, due to the suppression of independent experimentation, is in the limelight today because the consumer realizes it more keenly than the shortage of other basic materials.

"Nevertheless," he continued, "there is essentially no difference between what the Standard Oil of New Jersey has done in this case and what other companies did in restricting the production of magnesium, aluminum, tugsten carbide, drugs, dye stuffs and a variety of other critical materials vital for the war. So long as such cartel agreements continue to exist the inevitable result will be shortages in essential materials."

Arnold promised that it was not going to happen again. A policeman was needed on the job, he said, and he would not have signed the Newark consent decree otherwise.

The trust buster, using general terms, described the cartel arrangements as follows:

"Standard Oil of New Jersey desired a world monopoly in oil and synthetic gasoline. I. G. Farben was interested in chemicals. Each wanted to be free from competition of the other and also from independent competition. They, therefore, agreed that in the chemical field, which included synthetic rubber, I. G. Farben would have control.

"To implement that agreement Standard Oil was to turn over to I. G. Farben—either the information or the patents—to any chemical processes which it discovered not directly connected with its oil production. This included even the right to sell in the United States.

"In return, I. G. Farben agreed to turn over to Standard Oil any patents or discoveries which directly concerned oil production, including synthetic gasoline.

"Each company gave the other a world monopoly insofar as they were able to convey it, with the exception that Germany reserved its own market in synthetic gasoline while Standard Oil gave Germany control of synthetic rubber in the United States.

"This was done by setting up two patent pools—one for synthetic rubber and other chemicals controlled by Germany, the other for synthetic gasoline controlled by Standard Oil."

But the cartel, as Arnold went on to show, was a lopsided one in its results. He quoted from Standard Oil documents to show that in 1935 Howard was reporting that "the Hitler government does not look with favor upon turning the invention (buna rubber) over to foreign countries." The reason was "military expediency."

Howard, the documents showed, "deplored" the fact that the German government's restrictions on I. G. Farben had prevented Standard from making progress in the synthetic rubber field, "particularly as there is some indication that the American rubber companies are making independent progress."

Bringing the story of the "conspiracy" up to date, Arnold said:

"The requirements of the German army and Germany industry are now supplied by the I. G. Farben buna rubber, and German's production of rubber equals her former imports. This has freed Germany from the necessity of running the United Nations blockade on rubber.

"As I shall show, Standard Oil delayed the use of buna rubber in this country because the Hitler government did no wish to have this rubber exploited, for military reasons.

"Standard delayed the introduction of buna rubber even after it had received permission from I. G. Farben to make suitable arrangements. It is even more astonishing that on Standard's own development, namely, butyl, Standard has refused to license all but two rubber companies, with the exception of some specialty companies."

Senator Burton (Republican), of Ohio, observed that Standard Oil was "more or less taken for a ride" by Germany.

"Standard Oil was not seeking to aid or assist Germany," Arnold said. "It was looking to the establishment of its own monopoly in the United States."

Chairman Truman asked Arnold to appear again this morning at 10:30 o'clock to resume his testimony. The appearance of Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones, scheduled for this morning, was postponed.

NYA Provides Cheap Labor, Inquiry Told

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

The National Youth Administration was disclosed to Congress yesterday as a provider of cheap labor for a nonunion Georgia munitions factory.

The disclosure was the inadvertent consequence of the eloquence of one of 15 witnesses, invited by the NYA to testify against legislation to curtail activities of that agency and the Civilian Conservation Corps.

From Clifford Brannon, counsel for the Le Tourneau Co., a Senate committee learned that the company's nonunion shell-casing factory at Toccoa, Ga., is able to obtain from NYA partially trained mechanics at a starting wage lower by 10 cents an hour than rates paid beginners at the firm's plant at Peoria, Ill.

Witnesses from 12 States

This was conveyed to the Senate Education and Labor Committee toward the close of a hearing on a bill sponsored by Senator McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, to require President Roosevelt to economize on expenditures for NYA and CCC.

All of the committee's 15 witnesses, it was learned, either were "invited" to testify or were summoned at the request of Aubrey Williams, National Youth Administrator. Coming from 12 States, the witnesses were for the most part educators—one of them was a University president—and industrial executives.

After Brannon's testimony, Senator McKellar commented:

"The Congress of Industrial Organizations and the American Federation of Labor have both pledged their support for continuation of NYA," McKellar said. "I don't see how they can go along now. It looks like the whole thing is out of gear."

Boys Are "Shop-Broken"

In lyrical phrases delivered in the whirlwind manner of the old-fashioned Southern orator, Brannon told the committee of the "strapping" youths who come to work in his company's plant at Toccoa, "the city beautiful," from poor homes in the Blue Ridge Mountains. Of the factory's 1900 employes, he said, 382 are from these homes, where the family income is about $300 a year.

But NYA, through its schools for training war industry workers, transforms these youths from nonproductive, frequently illiterate, youngsters into "shop-broken" workers.

McKellar brought from the witness the disclosure that the minimum pay at the Toccoa plant, owned principally, Brannon said, by a religious institution founded by a "sincere Christian," is 30 cents an hour. At the union shop at the company's Peoria plant the starting wage is 40 cents, he said.

Brannon spoke of the "patriotic fervor" which Toccoa labor puts into its job.

"Ahhhh! That's fine, you are getting them cheaper," McKellar exclaimed. "Can I suggest that you examine the payroll in union shops and give these boys the same wages?"

Purdue President Testifies

Herbert H. Pease, president of the New Britain (Conn.) Machine Co., told the committee that his company employes about 3000 workers, of which 263 are NYA trained. NYA, he said, is producing a "fine class of boys," the kind of who "come down with the right ideas," who "come down to work," who "stick."

Dr. Edward G. Elliott, president of Purdue University and close friend of Paul V. McNutt who, as Federal Security Administrator, is overseer for NYA and CCC, said thousands of students would be compelled to leave college if NYA's student-aid program is abolished.

Other witnesses were John G. Pipkin, Arkansas welfare commissioner, and Clarence E. Williams, Packard Motor Car Co., Detroit; Msgr. Francis Kelly, president of Seton Hall College, South Orange, N. J.; T. G. Quigley, Georgia School of Technology; Dr. Paul B. Jacobson, principal of University High School, University of Chicago, and Dr. James Richmond, president, Murray State Teachers' College, Murray, Ky.

McKellar last night said he would submit to the committee today an amendment to his bill which would permit retention of CCC camps at Army bases "when the Army wants them."

Richard Sweeney's Funeral Today In Alexandria

Funeral services will be held at 9:30 a. m. today from St. Mary's Church, in Alexandria, for Richard Edward Sweeney, 69, active in the Democratic Party of the city for the last quarter of a century. Burial will be in St. Mary's Cemetery. He died Wednesday at his home, 817 South Alfred Street.

Mr. Sweeney, who served on Alexandria's first World War selective service board, was for 21 years a member of the city electoral board, which he headed for several terms.

He came to Alexandria as a young man from Upperville, Va., and operated a grocery store at the corner of Duke and Henry Streets until six years ago. He later worked at Fort Belvoir, being forced to retire by illness a year and a half ago.

Mr. Sweeney was a member of the Holy Name Society of St. Mary's Catholic Church. He leaves his wife, Frances M. Sweeney, a daughter, Margaret Frances Sweeney, of Alexandria; a step-daughter, Miss Ida Hall, Washington, and a brother, John T. Sweeney, of Gainesville, Va.

No First-Aid Hoarding Seen By Red Cross

Hoarding of first-aid materials may be in vogue throughout the country, as the Office of Civilian Defense charges, but the American Red Cross—which guides OCD's first-aid training—has had no evidence of it.

"We haven't been conscious of it, nor are we especially concerned about it," Harold F. Enlow, Red Cross first-aid director, said last night.

The Red Cross always has believed homes, offices and schools should have a stock of first-aid materials—and still believes it, Enlow said.

"Of course there are many new customers on the market now. Between December 7 and February we issued three million textbooks on first-aid classroom instruction," he said.

Meantime, James M. Landis, director of OCD, explained that the charge of hoarding of first-aid supplies was intended simply to warn civilians of the danger of critical shortages of equipment. He said it might threaten the supplies of the Army and Navy medical corps and of the organized civilian emergency medical services.

"As the statement pointed out," Landis said, "there is small likelihood that civilians trained in first aid can be of major assistance in caring for those who are actually injured by the explosion of bombs. That is a job for trained professional doctors in the emergency medical units. But there are many, many other uses for first-aid training—uses which may well arise from a blackout or an actual raid. In cases of minor injuries of this nature, a knowledge of first aid is invaluable. I again urge, however, that civilians shall not hoard first-aid equipment. They should remember that there are shortages in that field, too, and that excessive purchases on their part may cost the lives of our men on the firing line. Those men come first."

The popularity of first-aid classes jumped up on the West Coast of the country first, then spread to the East Coast, and is now concentrated in the Midwest, Enlow said.

He pointed out, however, that while the coastal regions increased their demands four or five times, the demand for training had only doubled in the Midwest.

Almost each piece of OCD literature stresses the value of first aid, which is made the first essential bit of training for air raid wardens, firemen, policemen and several other civilian defense helpers.

Through an arrangement with the Red Cross OCD got its first aid classes run by that agency, took the printing of first-aid textbooks so that students would not have to pay for them. In the meantime, however, the emergency medical services of OCD were developing and its directors decided perhaps everybody connected with civilian defense need not know first aid.

Defense Groups, Taxi-Ambulance Units Wait 'Mobilization for Disaster' Test Tonight

With more than 700 individuals and 300 taxi ambulances participating, Washington tonight will witness its first "mobilization for disaster" treatment and transportation under conditions simulating an actual air raid.

The demonstration will be staged at 8 o'clock on Fourth Street Northeast between Lincoln Road and Michigan Avenue in four blocks especially protected by the police department.

Sponsors of the show are the motor transport division of the District Defense Council, the District Red Cross, the American Women's Voluntary Services, and a cross-section of the city's physicians, nurses, taxi and truck drivers.

In addition to 300 taxicabs equipped with special-built stretchers, 25 trucks and ambulances from hospitals will participate in the test.

J. A. Brown, chief of the defense motor transport section, will be in charge, with Mrs. L. E. Harris, of the Red Cross, and Mrs. John Sternhagen, of the A. W. V. S., serving as assistant transportation chiefs. I. A. Faddin will be in charge of truck transportation and John H. Royer of taxi-ambulances. Dr. John A. Reed and all the emergency medical units serving under him will participate and Red Cross shock canteen units will be on hand.

Stretcher handling and litter bearer drills will be staged. At least two "patients" will be on stretchers to each hospital represented in the mobilization.

Another civilian defense show on the local schedule tonight is the meeting sponsored by the British War Relief Society, under Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, at the Departmental Auditorium.

Five war films furnished by the British Press Service will be shown. The meeting is at 8:30 o'clock.

Two reels of motion pictures—"The Commandos in Action" and "Fighting the Fire Bomb"—will be shown Tuesday at 7:45 p. m. at a meeting in Fairfax Village, it was announced yesterday by Zone Warden William G. Noland.

The meeting will be held at the Ryland Methodist Church, Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast at Branch Avenue. Philip Conant, assistant zone warden, wil serve as chairman. Speeches will be made by Charles A. King and Noland.

'Curfew' Dance Tonight At Roosevelt High

A "curfew" dance will be held tonight in the armory of Thedore Roosevelt High School, Thirteenth and Upshur Streets Northwest, by the National Defense Recreation Association. Dancing will begin at 7:30 and end at 10:30 p. m. All Federal employes are invited.

Warden Training Program Opened

An American Legion air-raid warden training program has been opened throughout the country, it was announced yesterday by James M. Landis, Director of OCD.

Landis said the program will involve no direct Federal expenditure, adding that the legion is paying the expenses and has prepared courses subject to OCD approval. President Roosevelt has approved of the plan, whose final objective is to train 1,250,000 persons as wardens.

Approximately 900,000 wardens are needed in American cities and larger towns and an additional 350,000 are required in rural areas. Graduates of legion schools will be eligible for certification as trained wardens and will take their places in the civilian defense corps under their local defense councils.

Coal Price Rise Held Not Justified

Washington retail coal dealers who increased prices 25 cents per ton last January and then rescinded the advance upon request of the Office of Price Administration pending an investigation, yesterday were notified by John E. Hamm, acting administrator, that such a price increase was not justified.

In his notification to the Washington dealers of OPA's decision, Hamm asked that prices be continued at levels not higher than those prevailing during the December 15-31, 1941, period.

Planting Carrots Won't Aid MacArthur

Go ahead with your landscaping, the Department of Agriculture and Office of Civilian Defense yesterday advised city dwellers. Do not labor under the impression that MacArthur will be aided if you plow up your yard and plant carrots in it.

The two agencies have issued a joint booklet on "Victory Gardens." Its major purpose is to get Americans to be more discriminating in the development of city gardens than they were during World War I.

Generally speaking, the experts want you to think twice before "wasting" seed, fertilizer, or garden tools. If you must garden, the land should be good and your plans up to snuff.

Two Die in Crash Of Army Trainer

More Personal Religion Asked By Clergyman

More personal religion is one of the greatest needs of our day, declared the Rev. Dr. Seth R. Brooks yesterday at the Penn Theater, where he addressed Southeast churches' lenten services. He is pastor of the Universalist National Memorial Church.

"We need more personal religion and more persons with a religion," said the clergyman, adding that "our day craves spiritual certainty—certainty of God, certainty of the value of prayer, and certainty of the immortal life."

"A personal religion comes through doing good," continued Dr. Brooks, "for if religion ends with the individual it simply ends, because a personal religion must be expressed through helping others."

The Rev. Edward Gabler, rector of Christ Episcopal Church, Navy Yard Parish, will be today's speaker.

The Very Rev. Noble C. Powell, Coadjutor Bishop of Maryland and former dean of Washington Cathedral, addressed Chevy Chase Lenten services last night at Chevy Chase Baptist Church.

The Right Rev. Granville Gaylord Bennett, Suffragan Bishop of Rhode Island, today at noon will conclude his series of Lenten addresses at Epiphany Episcopal Church. The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, will speak there daily at noon, Monday through Thursday.

Lineman Killed As Wire Cutter Hits Power Line

Virgil Payne, 24-year-old lineman for an electrical firm, was killed yesterday when his wire cutter struck a high-tension line on a pole on Leesburg Pike near Colvin Run, Va.

Current of 6600 volts shot through Payne's body. H. H. Nector, another lineman working on the pole, released Payne from the wire and summoned the McLean fire rescue squad and Fairfax County police.

An additional supply of oxygen was rushed from Arlington County by Fire Chief A. C. Scheffel and from the Southern Oxygen Co. Firemen administered artificial respiration for more than four hours, but efforts to revive the lineman were unavailing. He was pronounced dead by Dr. T. B. McCord, Fairfax County coroner.

Payne lived in Webster Springs, Va., and was employed by the R. W. S. Corporation, electrical contractors, Roanoke, Va.

Newkirk Credited With 28 Planes

Jack Newkirk, member of the "Flying Tigers," got 28 enemy planes before he was shot down in an American air raid on Japanese-held Thailand, the Navy Department announced last night.

Newkirk, squadron leader of American volunteer flyers in the Far East, was released from active duty with the Navy to enlist in the "Flying Tigers."

Economy Drive Holds Up U.S. Travel Funds

A move to halve travel allowance for employes of the State, Justice and Commerce Departments in the next fiscal year yesterday held up Appropriations Committee approval of a 22-million-dollar appropriation for those agencies.

The proposal came on a motion made to the committee by Senator McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, who recently served notice of his intention to press for reduction in Government travel allowances by giving the Senate an itemized statement of the 147-million-dollar travel bill for the calendar year 1941.

President Roosevelt's 1943 budget estimates for travel by employes of the three departmnts total $8,541,-$1,087,340 is estimated; for the 962. For the State Department, Justice Department, $5,051,500; for Commerce, $1,780,602, and for the Federal judiciary, included in the bill, $622,520.

McKellar's motion called for a 50 per cent cut in all travel allowances. Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, chairman of the subcommittee that handled the bill, countered with a proposal that travel costs be given further study.

An indiscriminate, all-inclusive cut, McCarran argued, might result in "terrifying disruption of the efficiency of every department." At his suggestion, the bill, which has already passed the House, was rereferred from the full committee to the subcommittee for further hearings.

Last night members of the committee staff notified officials of the departments to appear at the Capitol today to "rejustify" their travel estimates.

McCarran pointed out that the Civil Aeronautics Authority in the Commerce Department, employs about 1000 men whose "sole duty is to travel." These, he said, are responsible for the care of circuits of aircraft beacon lights.

Although declaring that he intends to "go right to the bone" of travel allowances, he observed that a 50 per cent cut in the travel of Federal Bureau of Investigation agents would be tantamount to elimination of the FBI.

Fugitives From a Bull Pen—but Not Dodgers'

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

CHINA SHOPS CLOSED THEIR DOORS—Some of the ten bulls which escaped from a truck in the heart of Brooklyn yesterday are caught after scampering through streets and alleys with police and volunteers in pursuit. "Dem Bums" were down South so Brooklyn knew it wasn't their bull pen that was open. They learned that the bulls were bound for a packing house when they broke loose

Four Wheels, Only 3 Tires Pose Problem

When your tires wear out they will not fall to pieces all at once like the one hoss shay. Instead, one will probably give way, leaving a car with three tires in more or less usable condition.

What to do with those three tires on cars for which no replacements will be allowed for the fourth one is a problem now confronting the Office of Price Administration and, to a lesser extent, the Office of Defense Transportation.

A pool for these superfluous tires is held by some officials to be the most logical solution. Such a pool has already been started on the West Coast by the California Shipbuilding Co., The Post was informed last night.

The Government wants all such sharing to be on a purely voluntary basis. Its ideal solution is for the man with three good tires on a strictly civilian car to put them into the pool, so three drivers of three-tired defense cars can take them out.

Who shall pay the donor, and what shall be done with the selfish driver who will not give up his leftovers is a question upon which the Government does not choose to comment. Officials keep emphasizing that such cooperation must be voluntary.

Further assurance that Uncle Sam is not (at the moment) contemplating moving in with jack and wrenches to pull tires off pleasure cars was given yesterday by John Orr Young, founder of Young & Rubicam Advertising Co., now in OPA's rationing division.

"Though there have been intimations by newspaper columnists that such a plan is being considered, I can say frankly that I don't believe any such plan exists," Young told the Junior Board of Commerce at its luncheon yesterday.

Young, who was conducting an open forum rather than delivering a speech, said such a report was dangerous, as it seems to have induced in some drivers a devil-may-care idea of using up their tires as fast as they can, thinking "the Government will get them anyway."

D. C. Widow Sues Steamboat Line

Mrs. Elizabeth M. Murphy, of 1416 Holbrook Street Northeast, filed a $50,000 damage suit in District Court yesterday against the Norfolk & Washington Steamboat Co., charging the company with negligence causing the death of her husband.

The husband, Harry B. Murphy, who was first mate on the Northland, was drowned on April 13, 1941, when he fell from the top deck of the steamer, en route from here to Norfolk.

Mrs. Murphy asserts that her husband at the time of the fall was helping to capture a drunken passenger who had been causing trouble. She said the passenger had been locked in a stateroom several times and each time had escaped.

She charges the ship's captain—acting as an agent of the company—was negligent in failing to lock up the drunk securely, and that the company itself was negligent in failing to equip the deck from which her husband fell with proper guard rails.

Western's First Battalion Wins In School Drill

Before a crowd of more than 3500, Western High School's first battalion won first place for the fourth consecutive year in the annual drill meet, held yesterday afternoon at Central High School Stadium.

The second battalion of Western won second honors and the first battalion of Central High School placed third.

In the band meet, Woodrow Wilson High School's band was awarded first place. Western's band was second and Anacostia High School's was third.

Libya Patrols Clash In Sandstorm

Cairo, Egypt, March 26 (AP).—Despite the sandstorm blowing in Libya "considerable enemy mechanized transport movements were reported in areas south of Tmimi and north of Mekili yesterday," British general headquarters announced today.

"Our armored cars were shelled in the Al Kima area," said the communique. "Later in the day some enemy armored cars were forced to withdraw from a position slightly north of Al Kima."

Offensive patrolling, including sorties by the R. A. F. in protection of Britain's forward troops, continued."

Austin Criticizes Senators For Sidestepping on Langer

By the Associated Press

Senator Austin (Republican), of Vermont, told the Senate yesterday it had a duty to protect its integrity and could not sidestep that issue through "some clever legal device" in voting on a resolution to exclude Senator Langer (Republican), of North Dakota.

Supporting a recommendation of the Senate Elections Committee that Langer be denied a seat by a majority vote, he contended that affirmative action on an amendment by Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, to require a two-thirds vote would be "more devastating" to the moral power of the United States than any decision it might make on the merits of the case.

Several Senators remained to be heard in the Langer case as the Senate approached a vote on the Overton proposal, and then on a resolution declarin, Langer was not entitled to a seat, possibly today.

Senate attention was diverted to debate on the war effort before Majority Leader Barkley (Democrat), of Kentucky, Minority Leader McNary (Republican), of Oregon, and Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, could be heard on the Langer case and they were expected to obtain recognition today.

Austin, who contended the Senate of the United States was on trial in the controversy, declared that the charges of moral turpitude against Langer covered the "most remarkable history of misconduct" in public office that the Senate had ever considered.

Score For Arnold

The only trouble with Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold is that he is serving his country with shining honesty as well as with conspicuous ability. The country knows it, even if Attorney General Biddle doesn't. Arnold in his zeal to do his job according to his own and nobody else's lights is afraid neither of industry nor of labor. Nor does he, as the Attorney General seems to think he should, time his crusades and outspokenness according to the seasons. A wrong to him is just as wrong now as ever.

But he is now the beneficiary of a piece of fortuitous timing. On the heels of being charged with an antilabor bias at an unfortunate time—when he merely responded to a Congressional request for evidence of his well-known conclusions—comes news of his success in his campaign against the world cartels which have been impeding our war efforts. The Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey has released patents governing production of synthetic rubber and gasoline.

This is a rich reward for Mr. Arnold's campaign. While the United States remained remote from the world conflict, the Standard's long-standing agreement with the German dye trust could at least be defended on the ground that it had given this country the benefit of some vital German discoveries. The war has, however, brought home to us the dangerous political implications of the world-wide cartels to which many of our strategic war industries have been parties.

As Mr. Arnold says, there is essentially no difference between what the Standard has done in holding out on rubber patents and what other companies did in restricting the use of magnesium, drugs, dyestuffs, and other materials vital to our war effort. However, the reluctance to release patents that would relieve our acute rubber shortage dramatizes the conflict between private interest and national welfare which so frequently arises when world cartels are formed. In this case the conflict is so grave as to justify Mr. Arnold's demand that the cartel practices which have resulted in hampering our war production must not be reinstated after the war is over. It pays to listen to Mr. Arnold in this as in other respects.

Dagger At India

Sir Stafford Cripps' mission to mobilize India against the Japanese within the framework of a new relation within the British Commonwealth should be helped by Japanese acquisition of the Andaman Islands. For the islands, which are in the Bay of Bengal, point like a dagger at India.

The islands became easy prey to the Japanese as soon as Malaya, Sumatra and southern Burma fell into their hands. After the capture of Rangoon the archipelago, which has only the most rudimentary defenses, was bombed with impunity. Only 120 miles separate the southwestern tip of Burma from the most northerly of the islands. But the British had already withdrawn. They began moving out their tiny garrison and as many as possible of the 21,000 inhabitants of the islands soon after the fall of Singapore.

The new development is of practical as well as symbolic significance. The Andaman Islands are the first bits of Indian territory to fall into the hands of the enemy. The move thus suggests that whatever other directions the Japanese may take, a drive on India is possible. What is of more immediate importance is that the islands lie in relatively close proximity to the main ship lanes between Ceylon and Calcutta. The Andamans are less than 600 miles from the mouth of the Ganges and 800 miles from Trincamalee, the British naval base in Ceylon. The supply route is of vital importance to the struggle for Burma.

And in that theater of war the enemy continues to make progress. He appears to have assembled an air force considerably in excess of that possessed by the United Nations. If Burma is held, the possession by Japan of the Andaman Islands will constitute little more than a nuisance to the Allies. If the Japanese continue to push ahead in Burma, they can use the islands as bases for a giant pincers movement directed against India. We fancy India is now thoroughly awake to its danger.

Let Congress Convert

Congress is making a conscientious but inefficient effort to see that our machinery of war functions smoothly. Its technique is to inquire into every major war problem through its standing or special committees and then to pass legislation or offer its advice to administrative officials. That is a useful and necessary service. After all, Congress is responsible for our major national policies. It must keep itself informed so as to be able to legislate intelligently. Incidentally, it is also rendering an important service by keeping the public informed.

But the ironical fact about these multifarious investigations is that Congress is making the same mistake that it is trying to correct in the Administration. As The Post has previously noted, and as Walter Lippmann reemphasized yesterday, these investigations entail a critical waste of effort. Even if it could be argued that the time and energy of Congressmen are worth little, the heavy strain which these committees are imposing upon men who are responsible for the conduct of the war is nonetheless a serious matter. Two committees are investigating the burning of the Normandie. There is repeated duplication between the work of the Truman Committee and the three subcommittees investigating various aspects of the war-production program for the House. Some of the testimony recorded by these bodies also has a close relationship to that now being taken by the House Naval Affairs Committee.

The Tolan Committee has covered a wide field and has made a number of constructive recommendations. Still it has duplicated, in some measure, fields covered by other investigating groups. Unlike most of the others, the Tydings Committee is working by the questionnaire method. That will give it far less chance to get out into the limelight than some other groups have. Its object is to minimize duplication and to bring about a shift of Government employes, where practicable, from nonwar to war agencies. That is a worthy and important undertaking, but it throws into bold relief the duplication and waste effort within Congress itself.

Nor are the special investigating committees alone responsible for this haphazard procedure. Senator Elmer Thomas recently went out of his way to take testimony from such officials as Donald Nelson, Admiral Land, Undersecretary of War Patterson, Secretary Perkins and various others on the subject of war labor policies. Now this testimony is being duplicated in large part before the House Naval Affairs Committee. Some of these witnesses have also appeared in executive session before the Senate Labor Committee of which Senator Elbert D. Thomas is chairman. In other words, Elmer Thomas has been encroaching upon the domain of Elbert Thomas. That seems particularly inexcusable, for Elmer Thomas' subcommittee was merely considering a War Department appropriations bill.

Certainly there is a need for consolidation of these investigative efforts. Busy executives simply do not have time to tell the same story to three or four groups of legislators. The Byrd Committee might well serve as a model for others. It represents two House and two Senate Committees as well as the Budget Bureau and the Treasury. During this emergency joint committees ought to be set up whenever the Senate and House have common interests in securing information. If two groups working in the same field cannot be brought together, they can at least rely upon printed hearings when once a subject has been explored by one of them. Haphazard investigative methods are as detrimental to an all-out war effort as is fumbling in the executive departments. Cannot Congress take its own medicine?

Smoldering France

From Vichy the other day came an announcement of the execution of two French seamen and the imprisonment of a third on charges of mutiny at sea. It is made clear, however, that this was no ordinary mutiny and that the sailors' purpose was to seize their ship, the Gabriel Guisthau, and join the forces of General de Gaulle. The plan was a daring and desperate one. For the ship was part of a French convoy which was running the British blockade through the Strait of Gibraltar. In the darkness of night the sailors made their way to the bridge and ordered the captain at pistol point to separate the ship from the convoy and make for Gibraltar. The captain fled from the bridge and the sailors fired, wounding him. Unhappily for them, the shots were heard aboard one of the escorting destroyers, with the result that the ship was boarded from the destroyer, and the mutineers disarmed.

The story is significant because it testifies to the extent of the anti-Vichy tension within occupied France. It may be assumed that the crews for such vessels are pretty carefully picked by the Vichy authorities. Yet at least two such mutinies in French convoys have occurred less than eight weeks apart. The other, aboard the French merchantman Formigny, took place off the Portuguese coast and was quite successful. Four ship's officers as well as members of the crew were involved. After the captain had been made prisoner, the Formigny eluded the convoy and slipped successfully into a British port. The Vichy government has, of course, retaliated with the usual death sentence, in absentia.

The frequency of such episodes, the extraordinary boomerang of the Riom trials, the nervous Vichy protestations of good faith concerning Martinique and Madagascar, the increasing brutalities of the Nazi reprisals—all show what kind of fires are smoldering close to the surface in both occupied and unoccupied France. Nothing is more certain than that one of these days the fires will erupt.

Bloody, But Unbowed

If there are any people who, in General MacArthur's words, are engaged in writing their history in red on the breasts of their enemies, those people are the Yugoslavs. The record in Berlin is that they are crushed. But the reverberate hills of old Serbia give no such impression. Rather they resound with a fighting spirit which is unconquerable. At least 100,000 guerillas are serving today under Gen. Draja Mikhailovich. They are the custodians of free Yugoslavia, and tie up many thousands of Hitler's soldiers, who, but for them, would be spreading their foul order elsewhere.

These gallant members of the Freedom Front come vividly to mind today. For exactly a year ago the people overthrew Prince Paul's government, which two days before had truckled to Hitler. The people would not be party to an arrangement under which the Nazi legions would have had free access through Yugoslav territory. Yugoslavia paid dearly for its refusal to submit. Hitler blasted his way through, razed a goodly part of Belgrade, and visited a terrible revenge upon the defenseless population. It was a blitzkrieg that left the world aghast. But the victory was only surface, and a year after the event we find the Yugoslavs still in arms, still undaunted, and still taking toll of the victors.

Yet there are those who feel that in its act of defiance Yugoslavia committed suicide. The conclusion has no practical or spiritual merit. By giving in the Yugoslavs would not even have saved the lives of their people. What was in store for an acquiescent Yugoslavia is shown in the experience of her Balkan neighbors. Rumania succumbed without a shot. But today the Rumanians are shedding their blood in Russia as Hitler's slaves. Yugoslavia fought to save her soul, not to fasten an alien tyranny on other people. That in itself insures survival. And Yugoslavia is still fighting, with her soul stronger from the trial. In the end she will descend from the mountains in triumph.

Don't Fall Ill

Tragedies may soon be unavoidable in this city of crowded hospitals. On Wednesday not a single bed was available for an emergency case of pneumonia, and the only bed vacant in Alexandria Hospital was finally secured for the patient after much difficulty. Washingtonians remember that a victim of a heart attack killed himself recently because no hospital could take him in. Nor is this congestion a result of occasional heavy demands. Commissioner Mason recently told the Senate Labor Committee that every hospital in the city is jammed to the roof.

What would happen in event of an air raid or a serious epidemic resulting from overcrowding of the city by war workers? We hesitate to predict the consequences. But they would be so dire that the mere thought of them should stir the Capital to action now. Experts have estimated its shortage of hospital beds at roughly 800 for the private hospitals and about 1000 for Gallinger and Glenn Dale. But the private hospitals can raise no capital for expansion. They are patiently waiting for Congress to step in and ease their plight in this great emergency.

Yet Congress continues to talk and stall as if the Lanham bill for Washington and vicinity were a piece of long-range legislation that could be passed at any time in the next decade. Four months have passed since officials began their drive for emergency legislation to provide housing and various community services for warworkers coming to Washington. Yet the Lanham bill for this area has just been sent to conference and apparently the conferees do not intend to meet until next week. Considering the desperate situation taking shape with regard to both housing and hospitals, this stalling is almost certain to hamper the war program, if it does not result in direct loss of life within the community.

Inflationary

Many of the words used in your paper and on the radio are foggy to me. For example, those words inflation and inflationary.

I hear that if a man works 40 hours a week and gets $25 he is o. k. If he works more than 40 hours a week and is paid overtime he suddenly becomes "inflationary." Then he is a dangerous man.

But I never hear anyone say that a man who gets $1000 a week is inflationary, and if he doubles his own salary that apparently doesn't make him inflated either—though he must feel so. Why is that? And what determines just the amount of wages or salaries that destroys a man's innocence and makes him inflationary and dangerous?

That Bowman girl whose picture you printed and who got $39,000 a year for being a secretary—is she inflationary? And if a private company can pay a secretary so much, why can't the Government pay on that basis? Would that be inflationary or would it be boondoggling?

The President says inflation is most dangerous, and this seems to be tied up with our ability to buy things we want. Can't a man who gets $1000 a week buy more than one who gets $25? Why can't we prevent inflation during the war by not making anything that isn't just food, houses and bedclothes. You can't buy what isn't made—or is this foolish?

Also, they tell us that boys getting $21 a month will fight for their lives on Bataan. Yet they also tell us you can't get businessmen to do anything without the profit motive. The profit motive, they say, is necessary to keep America what it is. There can't be much profit in $21 a month. What do they mean? Isn't human nature the same under swallow-tails as well as uniforms?

BEWILDERED.

Axis Terror

There is this horror also in the background to be considered when we contemplate a possible Axis conquest of the world: The Axis masters, being masters of the tactics of terror, will use terror, not only to the point where no slave on earth will ever live to see happiness or peace again, but also as means to prevent their slaves from seeking death as a way out of their slavery, which is so useful to their masters.

Although as strange to our kindly Christian way of life as many another Axis practice, this use of terror to prevent miserable slaves from finding relief through death is already being exploited. German soldiers, if not the workers in German-conquered lands, are already being warned that if they commit suicide, their families will be penalized. The beginning has been made! And what a vista of horror opens up, as we contemplate the possibilities of this way of terror, and contemplate, also, the fact that the Nazis never shrink from any step because of its cruelty, but shrink only when they doubt whether they can get by with it, for a little while yet!

Let anybody try to find, anywhere in all the realm of human affairs, two things more absolutely and uncompromisingly opposed than the Axis' "new order" of slavery, and the kindly civilization of the Christian world! The true Christian has no choice, save that of throwing all his energies, his whole heart and soul, into this totally fateful struggle, which is now sharpening like nothing before in the whole of human history.

Filipinos For The Draft

The article entitled "Filipinos Abroad" by Ernest Santos on page 11 of your March 24 issue would have been a perfect tribute to the loyalty of the Filipinos to the Stars and Stripes if it were not for his third paragraph which exposes Filipinos in the Federal service to the contempt of their American co-workers.

Being one of the few in the class attacked by Mr. Santos, I wish to state that after comparing notes with a number of my colleagues in this city not one of us intends to be a would-be slacker. Those of us who are still in the Federal service and who are of draft age are waiting for our induction call and it is not our fault that we have to wait because of an existing Army regulation which Mr. Santos apparently does not know, namely, that Filipinos cannot enlist although they may be inducted in the United States Army.

Does he know that a number of Filipinos in this city are now in the process of induction and that some of them are in the Federal service? It is bad enough that American writers have, in the past, unjustly accused Filipino sailors of furnishing the Japs with secret naval information or that the Filipinos never did like the American Government and everything American; but for a Filipino writer to accuse unjustly his own countrymen, while out of their homeland, of being slackers and service dodgers—the reading public can draw its own conclusions.

For myself I wish to refer Mr. Santos to the records of the War Department and of the Office of the Philippine Resident Commissioner, which show what efforts I have taken to get into the armed service, and I wish to add to this that if my efforts would bring some result I will again shoulder a gun. Is Mr. Santos already in the service?

Aping Mr. Santos' style of exemplifying his point by adage, I wish to invite his attention to another common Ilocano adage which says: "No bagui ti pagarigan, nalaca ti mangipapan." (One's opinion of others can be easily arrived at by using himself as the measure.)

Scrap Rubber

Can anyone tell me how I can dispose of scrap rubber so that it can be utilized?

Rubber is a most valuable commodity at the present time, but I know of no way to divert scraps of it for reclamation. The disposition of old metal, rags and paper has been amply publicized, but what about rubber? I think this matter is most important and if no plans have been made, proper officials should provide a mode of disposition immediately.

F. L. SMITH.

Chevy Chase, March 25.

Pay For Soldiers

It has come to my attention, as I suppose it has to all service men, that there is in the last stages of promotion a bill to increase the pay of junior officers and enlisted men in all branches of the service.

I do not know how many men are now serving in the armed forces of this country, nor do I know the number of men at present proposed as members of those forces. I know, however, that the percentage of increase of the various rates and commissions, when taken in aggregate, would reach an almost astronomical figure, and even in this age of astronomical figures such a sum represents a lot of those ships, tanks, guns and planes.

Certainly in a war to preserve democracy, the interests of those individuals that are and were fortunate enough to be born in the democracy should be subrogated to the best interests of the Nation, and certainly the best interests of this Nation are to be served by spending every cent that can be raised by taxation, bond sales, and the various other sources of revenue for those ships, tanks, guns and planes that we need so very badly. Cannot the interest of the individual be bettter served by winning the war in the quickest possible way, rather than by adding to the wage of some service men an inconsequential sum in a single instance, but a great sum when taken as a whole?

The idea of drawing a few dollars extra each month is appealing at first thought, but when one realizes what necessary things might be done with the money, and the further debt it will make necessarily payable after the war, another beer or a few hamburgers pale into insignificance.

If the money must be spent, why is it not possible to figure how much per year it would amount to, and then with that sum establish a fund for the families of the boys this war has killed and is going to kill?

I'm just a sailor, but for me full compensation for my services and the personal liberties and loss of monies that might be gained from private enterprise will be the knowledge that the world is free of its Hitlers, Mussolinis, Hirohitos, and Quislings. The greatest gift of God or man to any and all of us will be America, in particular, and the world, in general, at peace! B.N.W.

Alexandria, March 25.

Who's Complacent?

Who's complacent? Isn't it the public that's clamoring for an all-out, seven-day week effort? Who doesn't understand? Isn't it the public that didn't cause Pearl Harbor? And isn't it the public now clamoring for equipment for the boys we've forced to the front?

And isn't it the President who urges us not to be excited over a little war? Isn't it he that assures us that things are not so bad, after all—notwithstanding the thousands of priceless hopeful young lives already sacrificed to lag? Who's complacent? Isn't it he that insists upon his 40-hour week and penalty-pay for full time, all-out effort to arm our defenders?

Gentlemen, right here is where human expression is beggared and mortal conception staggered. We compel innocent, hopeful, heroic youth, our own children, brothers, husbands, to march into the pure hell of the firing line against rampaging savagery, to defend us and our way of life—and then permit a small gang on munificent payrolls to disarm them deliberately, in cold blood. Who's complacent?

JAMES WESLEY.

Clearwater, Md., March 24.

The Post Impressionist

Hongkong Memory

All about us were islands of burnt orange, as bare as your hand, without a tree or glimmer of green. Just naked red earth against the dazzling blue of the sea. And the sea was as blue as sapphires.

And then the ship gave a sharp turn and rising ahead was Hongkong. This town is built on a mountain rising high out of the sea. It was ceded by the Chinese to the British after the First Opium War, and was as bare and uninhabited then as the baked empty islands stretching about it today. The British put thousands of coolies to work, like an army of ants, who carried basketfuls of black earth and then planted seeds and trees and flowering vines until today Hongkong looks as the Hanging Gardens of Babylon must have looked.

The engines stopped and the big ship drifted into the harbor. It was like getting inside the frame of a picture. The passengers hanging over the rails all of a sudden became quiet. Hongkong was just the same. The mountain rose straight out of the sea—grew higher as we drew nearer. The harbor was crowded with ships from all over the world. Warships, merchantships and rusty freighters with their paint worn off. Sampans in everybody's way bobbing about like walnut shells, and square native junks with russet-brown sails or sails of the most beautiful blue. They came so close that you could see they were made of unstained teakwood of a warm and brownish tone. As the wind lifted they passed us and drifted out to sea.

A sheet of sound spread over the harbor made up of the shouts of boatmen, and the shrill cries of Chinese women, of ships signaling their arrival and the deep voices of others departing. From every side you could hear clear ships' bells telling the time, and the sudden harsh unwinding of heavy chains gaining momentum as the anchors dug into the sea. Our ship wove its way slowly through this pandemonium. After the long silence of the sea it was pleasant to hear the stir and bustle of life once more.

The Chinese in China are not at all like the laundrymen in America who go silently through back streets carrying great bundles of clothes. Life in China is exciting and dramatic. The people shout and fight and eat their food with loud smacking noises. There is not enough room in China for all her people. Even Hongkong, which is supposed to be English, swarms with Chinese. And China from behind moves in like the submerged current of a glacier—advancing—engulfing—flowing over every obstacle. And China will go on this way forever.

The banks along the Bund are British, and so are the clubs, and the docks and the warehouses. The music from the regimental band drifts down from the barracks and the streets are full of British soldiers. Their heavy shoes make a great tramping sound. But side by side and slipping through the streets are the Chinese with their smells and noise and color, their processions, and paper lanterns and dragons. The air is split by the bang and crash of brass cymbals and the high falsetto wailing of their sing-song girls from somewhere behind lattice windows.

But at first you think you are in Europe. The green terraces and pink and sunburned bungalows are like the Riviera with the stretch of blue sea beneath. The roads are swept and paved underfoot, and shaded above. Flowering gardens with sweet smells and hanging vines reach tier on tier to the very top of the peak, which is, of course, the top of this island mountain. All day and most of the night a slow funicular crawls up the mountainside, like a tired worm, to lift English men and women from the smothering heat of the town into the wet clouds that hang most of the time about the shoulders of the peak. And Chinese heat is not like English heat.

The mountain is covered with paths, where people can walk and where you hear the creak and rhythm of sedan chairs and the naked slap of the bearers' feet with their hard indrawn breathing. The ways are too steep for motors or even rickshaws. The British have done a great job with this town and harbor. But all of a sudden you grow tired of Hongkong and realize that Europe is a long way off, that Hongkong after all is nothing but a big rock with China behind and the open sea before. You are shut in like a prisoner and want to get away.

Sir Frederick Lugard was Governor of Hongkong when we were there and fresh from his post in Nigeria. We were told by everyone that Lady Lugard was the first woman correspondent to be associated with the London Times and as Flora Mackenzie had covered the South African War for that paper.

We were asked to dine at Government House to meet Viscount Ishii, the new Japanese Ambassador to Great Britain, who was passing through Hongkong on his way to London. The men at the dinner far outnumbered the women, as they always do in the East, and looked smart and up to date. European women who have lived long in the Tropics are always years behind the styles. At least they were at this time, when there were no clippers or planes to Paris and London. The heat took the color from their cheeks and the curl out of their hair. This, too, was before the advent of the permanent wave and the respectability of lipstick and rouge. They looked white and wilted and about them was a faint breath of mildew. Nevertheless, you could not help wondering if the British Empire would have spread so far and endured so long but for the courage and self-sacrifice of these women.

The women at the dinner seemed shy and slightly hostile toward Americans, as English women sometimes are—or were. This was, of course, before the First World War. Today there is a great difference—perhaps because of the Second World War. And Hitler with his comic face swelling big and bigger, like the wicked genii coming out of the bottle.

Rubber Controversy

By Ernest Lindley

Jesse Jones Gets The Blame

SINCE THE JAPANESE captured the sources of 98 per cent of our raw rubber, thus driving home to every automobile user the importance of the Malay archipelago, there has been a merry round of buck-passing in Washington. Why hadn't the Government hedged against this disaster by developing a great synthetic rubber industry? Jesse Jones, the Secretary of Commerce, has been getting a lion's share of the blame. He invited part of it by his remark that he didn't know anybody expected us to lose the East Indies.

When the full story is examined, it is evident that the responsibility for our present lack of a large synthetic production is widely distributed. The question was brought up and canvassed in 1940 and early 1941. The decision not to initiate a vast synthetic rubber program was based upon what seemed to be common sense.

Obviously if the loss of Malaya and the East Indies had been expected, a different decision would have been reached. But the possibility of such a disaster was considered and a plan was adopted to deal with it. Synthetic production is expensive and the steel and other materials for the plants would have competed with other military requirements. If the need arose, nevertheless, synthetic plants could be built and put into operation in a year to 18 months. It was decided, therefore, to build up a stockpile of natural rubber sufficient to meet essential requirements for a year or 18 months. If the Far Eastern sources should be lost, in part or in whole, this stockpile, it was thought would tide us over until synthetic plants came into operation.

EARLIER CALCULATIONS concerning the stockpile were thrown off by several factors. The first, and least expected, was the big requirements of our Allies. The British and the Russians were apparently even less foresighted than the United States. We have not only stopped importing rubber; we have to begin to export it on a large scale. Our Allies need large quantities in addition to the rubber we send them in the form of tires and other completed war equipment under lend-lease.

Another factor was the exceptionally heavy consumption of rubber in the United States in 1941. This could have been controlled by earlier action by the old OPM to cut down the processing of rubber for civilian use. On the other hand, these stocks of rubber—in processed form—are within the United States and so relieve the pain of the loss of Malaya and the East Indies.

A third factor was the shipping shortage, plus slowness in compelling ships to carry rubber instead of more profitable cargoes.

Nevertheless, according to informed officials, current supplies of rubber were pretty thoroughly cleaned out of Malaya and the East Indies before the Japanese moved in. And our stockpile, according to the most recently published figures, is around 700,000 tons.

THE COMMON indictment of Mr. Jones is that he vetoed a synthetic rubber program in 1940. This program was drafted and strongly supported by Edward R. Stettinius, jr., and William L. Batt, who were then in charge of materials for the National Defense Advisory Commission. It called for a production of 100,000 tons annually. Mr. Jones was against it, but so, it appears, were the President and several other officials. They did not want to make the investment unless it became necessary, and, especially, they did not want to build up a high-cost private industry which would demand tariff protection in the postwar years. This last objection can be circumvented by having the plants Government-owned—as Vice President Wallace insisted—and is now being met in that way.

The upshot was that a smaller synthetic program was authorized. But this was gradually expanded during 1941 until it closely approaches the 100,000 tons proposed by Stettinius and Batt. Unfortunately, most of the plant equipment has had a low priority rating. An output of 100,000 tons now would help, of course, but it would not materially alter the problem, which is to get a synthetic output of at least 300,000 tons in 1943 and at least 600,000 tons in 1944.

RFC SOURCES report that Mr. Jones has made arrangements for a synthetic capacity of 700,000 tons, to be reached at the end of 1943, and has located sources for another 200,000 tons. If high priorities are granted for the plant equipment, it is estimated that the operating capacity at the end of 1942 will be at least 90,000 tons and 300,000 tons by the middle of 1943. How big the program is to be and how fast it is to move depends chiefly on the scheduling, with reference to other military needs, of the manufacture of the plant equipment.

On Doing Without

THIS IS A WAR between standards of living. It is many things besides, but to the average citizen it is this more than anything else; and this is the answer to the citizen who asks how he can help. Many, of course, can serve in the armed forces or in essential war industry; but everyone—man, woman and child—can visualize himself as a soldier in the war between standards of living. Each can visualize himself as an individual economizer, pitted in a duel against a corresponding person in Germany, to see which can excel in a battle of doing without.

SULLIVAN

Germany has a long start. Eight years ago, preparing for war, Hitler divided all German production of goods into two kinds—that which was for civilian consumption, and that which was for war. Much the greater part has been for war. Hitler gave the Germans a slogan, "Do without butter in order to have bullets—better bullets than butter."

Germany has carried restriction of civilian consumption much farther than we now contemplate. We are about to begin rationing sugar, each individual to have so much per week—just how much is not yet decided. But Germany refines the rationing far beyond that. In Germany a worker at physical labor gets a certain quantity of sugar—carefully calculated as the least that will give energy for hard physical work. An indoor worker gets less.

THIS SORT OF refinement we can hardly practice. It may be doubtful if, in America, it would be worth the cost, in the form of the large administrative staff that would be necessary to carry it out. But in Germany, already highly regimented, it is practicable. And the German method illustrates the minuteness with which the Nazis have divided everything between war and civilian need, taking for war the last fraction of the possible maximum.

It is not that the particular sugar we do without in our home is needed to sweeten some soldier's coffee. It is not that the razor blades we do without are necessary for soldiers to shave themselves. Our people must see it in the immense pattern that Hitler shrewdly devises. There is in any nation a given quantity of energy, of capacity for producing goods. In normal times this production flows out along a thousand lines, producing a thousand separate kinds of goods. Hitler went back to the source. He divided the whole national stream of energy into two parts. One he devoted to war goods, the other he left for civilian consumption. It is the organization and allocation of the national energy that counts. The razor blades we do without may well appear, not as razor blades for soldiers but as steel for guns and armorplate.

WE HAVE FAR greater capacity for production, far more natural resources, than Germany. The United Nations combined have far more than the Axis nations combined. On this we congratulate ourselves. Prime Minister Churchill this week spoke of this superiority as a basis of hope for victory.

But there is danger of our being over-complacent. It is not the quantity of natural resources that counts. It is the allocation of them as between civilian and military use, and the minute organization of the military part into just the right proportion. We are under two handicaps. We have little experience in organizing our production of goods to serve a military purpose. Germany, in anticipation, has been at it for eight years, Japan for longer. Also, there is a handicap of distance against us. A large proportion of our national energy and productive capacity must be devoted to building cargo ships and carrying our military supplies across thousands of miles of water.

THERE IS YET another handicap which only our citizens can overcome. Our people have had little experience in doing without. The Germans and Japs have had much. They are accustomed to a standard of living which, to most Americans, seems pitifully low. But in the final tug of war, the last few weeks or months of strain, we must be willing, if necessary, to achieve and endure a standard of living approximating that of our enemies. For some time we shall not feel the strain, for we have much fat on our economic bones in the form of goods accumulated in our homes, which we can get along with for some time. But if this war is a prolonged one, fought to a finish, the American must endure for a few months of strain the standard of living that to a German is normal. Each American man, woman and child must be willing to outdo a corresponding German in a battle of doing without.

First European Revolt

By Andre Visson

Anniversary Of Yugoslav Crisis

A YEAR AGO, on the dawn of March 27, the hilly capital of Yugoslavia was the stage of one of the most significant events of this war. The Yugoslav officers, overwhelmingly Serbs, expressing the growing indignation of the Yugoslavs, but especially of the Serbs, overthrew the regime which had signed a compromise with the Axis.

Not only Gen. Dushan Simovich, who was heading the coup d'etat, and his political friends and advisers, but peasants in the remotest Serbian villages were perfectly aware, on this day of March 27, of the fact that by their action they were defying Hitler and approaching for their nation the tragic hour of the Nazi invasion, with all the sufferings and the horrors which such an invasion implies.

All other European peoples, attacked by Hitler and gallantly defending themselves as they could, have been left no choice. Hitler chose the hour of the invasion and destroyed them one by one. The Serbs were the first people in Europe to have made their choice. They had been offered by Hitler the chance to save not only their lives but the comforts of their young civilization, by letting Der Fuehrer nibble their sovereignty and their independence.

Their rulers had accepted Hitler's proposal and were imploring them to benefit by the material advantages of the compromise. They refused, however, and revolted. They were the first Europeans to revolt not only against Hitler but also against those rulers and statesmen who were disposed to play the part of the Quislings. And their courage was much greater, as they knew at the hour of their revolt, by the experience of Hitler's other victims, all the tragedy of the fate they had deliberately chosen for their people.

THEIR decision, as this writer stated it a year ago, did not come as a surprise to all those who have lived among them. When this writer predicted in these columns the Yugoslav revolt, he had no other inside information than the knowledge of Serbian character and Serbian mentality. It is superfluous to recall now all the practical consequences of this revolt. We all know now that this revolt and the gallant Greek defense of Crete have greatly contributed to Moscow's defense by delaying for six weeks Hitler's attack on Russia.

But as important as these practical consequences have been, there is something infinitely more important in the Belgrade revolt of March 27, 1941. It is its spiritual value. It is the spirit of the first European revolt, which is now so heroically maintained by the improvised army of his legendary Gen. Draja Mikhailovich, who, still fighting in the Sutobor Mountains, is writing with the blood of his 100,000 volunteers a war epic as wonderful as that which has been written in Bataan by Gen. MacArthur.

This writer does not want to analyze the political and strategical importance of Gen. Mikhailovich's action, who by his fight has immobilized a considerable number of Axis divisions not only in the Balkans but also in Western Europe, where Hitler began to fear similar revolts and guerilla warfare. Gen. Mikhailovich has created the real "Third Front" and deserves to receive a speedy response to his repeated appeals for all possible assistance.

This writer believes, however, that we will never overemphasize the moral significance of the revolt inaugurated by Gen. Simovich and carried on by Gen. Mikhailovich. It was not, as some people have believed it to be a year ago, a coup d'etat executed by a group of Serbian officers and politicians, inspired by their British and American friends. Draja Mikhailovich's army proved that it was the genuine revolt of Serbian peasants.

THESE SERBIAN peasants had the courage to revolt in Europe's darkest hours. They revolted when all Western Europe was conquered and enslaved. They fought before their Russian brothers had been compelled to fight in the East. Their only ray of hope was their faith in the United States, where many of them went to earn their living. They had faith in the United States and today we can have faith in Europe because there are still peoples who revolt against tyranny and prefer death to slavery.

It was certainly not by incident that the first European revolt took place in the Serbian provinces of Yugoslavia. The Belgians, the Dutch, the Norwegians—to say nothing of the French—are undoubtedly as freedom-loving as the Serbs. Why did they not revolt? And why could they not repeat the miracle of Mikhailovich's army?

It is only too obvious that the overpopulated and civilized Western Europe is less fit for a guerilla warfare than the mountainous regions of the Balkans. There is, however, this writer believes, still another, extremely important psychological reason which determined the Serbian revolt. It is the fact that the Serbs are a people practically without a bourgeoisie. The Serbian bourgeoisie is only in formation. The Serbian intellectuals are generally of peasant extraction. They have not yet lost their ties with the soil worked for centuries by their ancestors. How often this writer has met at the family table of a prominent Belgrade author, professor or statesman a grandfather or a grandmother, sitting at the place of honor in all the picturesque dignity of Serbian peasant costume.

NOW, THE PEASANTS everywhere in Europe have a much stronger spirit and principles than the bourgeoise, which, after having fought throughout the centuries for its rights, became gradually softened when it came to power and began to benefit by the material advantages of the European civilization to which it has so largely contributed. We must not forget, moreover, that after the World War I, the European middle classes, ruined by inflation and squeezed between the upper classes and the workmen, became the nursery for pro-totalitarian movements.

It would be most unfair to describe European aristocracy and upper bourgeoisie as "anti-democratic." There are many and many European aristocrats and rich bourgeoise who are today in the first lines of the world's battle for freedom. But it is, unfortunately, true that it is among Europe's upper classes that Hitler has found the greatest percentage of collaborationists, the majority of whom, apparently, have been freightened by the specter of social revolution.

As to the European bourgeoisie, as a whole, it is undoubtedly strongly opposed to Hitler's "New Order." But as it has gradually lost its fighting spirit, its opposition has now mainly a defensive character. The European bourgeois proved that they can still die very gallantly when they are attacked. The Serbian peasants, however, proved that they are prepared to die before they are attacked.

ONCE CONQUERED, the European bourgeoisie, while its upper classes are collaborating with the enemy, tries to resist by passive defense, by sabotage. The Serbian peasants, once conquered, seize their rifles and flee to the mountains to attack therefrom the invaders of their soil. A western European bourgeois, when he is a good patriot, willingly gives his life for his country, but is anxious to save his fortune for his son and his grandchildren. A Serbian peasant does not care for his home and his belongings. From experience he knows how to "live dangerously"—as Nietzsche urged it—and he sacrifices his property as easily as his life.

The Croats—in their majority—and the Slovenes have for the Nazis the same hatred as the Serbs. But the Croats and the Slovenes are, as well as the Czechs, westernized Slavs with a bourgeoisie anxious to save the material achievements of the civilization. This is probably the main reason why they were unable to join the Serbian peasants, who can claim today to have been the first in Europe to have raised the banner of revolt against Hitler's tyranny.

Turks Call Axis Envoys

Moscow Aide Included

By Thomas F. Hawkins
Associated Press Staff Writer

BERN, Switzerland, March 26.—Germany was reported tonight to be pushing a three-way diplomatic drive to smooth the differences which she herself instigated among her Balkan satellites, to bring Bulgaria into war against Russia and to maneuver Turkey into a position where the Turks will not hinder a Nazi smash toward the Caucasus and its oil.

Political circles in Berlin suggested that King Boris of Bulgaria, en route home after a talk with Adolf Hitler, might renounce his old East Thracian aspirations if this would accomplish a Turkish attitude favorable to the Axis.

This would imply a standstill agreement between Turkey and the Reich and perhaps concessions dealing with the Dardanelles or land transit privileges which Turkey thus far has avoided.

If no diplomatic agreement is reached, the prospect of military action cannot be ruled out, diplomatists said. Bulgaria, with troops maintained for over a year on the Turkish border, appeared to be the pivot in the negotiations.

KING BORIS was taking home requests that were virtually certain to arouse stormy discussion among his people who, as the Basel National Zeitung put it, generally have given the impression of willingness to "fight anybody except the Russians."

A Havas dispatch from Sofia tonight said two Bulgarian deputies of the majority party had resigned. No reason was given.

(Anti-Russian demonstrations already were reported to have begun in Sofia, and "Boris is also understood to have agreed to send 200,000 troops to assist Germany in her next drive," the Mail said.)

Turkey, according to an Istanbul report printed by Il Giornale d'Italia in Rome, recalled her Ambassadors to both Moscow and the Nazi-Fascist capitals to discuss the immediate political military future of southeastern Europe.

Meanwhile, Dr. Carl Clodius, Hitler's economic trouble-shooter, hurried to Bucharest and saw Acting Premier Mikhail Antonescu to talk over the situation created by the new Rumanian outcry for return of the large slice of Transylvania which Germany awarded to Hungary in 1940.

CLEARLY, Germany's main objective is Balkan men for an offensive which, some neutral dispatches from Germany said, has fallen several weeks behind schedule because of the unusually long winter and the difficulties of supply and transport.

Both Hungary and Rumania want to keep their men at home in case their own dispute flares into battle. Bulgaria is trying to keep out of the actual fighting and still advance her own sphere of political influence.

Lest there be any miscalculation about Bulgaria's obligations to Germany, however, the German press referred pointedly today to the German army "which made it possible to give back to Bulgaria the Macedonian provinces which she lost (to Rumania) in the first World War."

WHILE BULGARIA probably would be willing to enter any campaign against Turkey, it is difficult to predict what might occur if she went to war against Russia. A large pro-Soviet sentiment still exists there and is regarded as responsible for a series of attempts to sabotage communications and coal mines.

Bulgar circles in Istanbul said they did not believe Germany would dare to use Bulgarian troops in actual combat against the Russians, but that they probably would be employed for purposes of clean-up and occupation.

Even that was ominous to many Bulgars, who feared it would mean postwar Rusian reprisals of a terrible nature.

THE MOSCOW radio tonight quoted informed circles in Ankara, Turkey, as saying that a bloody battle between Hungarian and Rumanian troops on the Eastern Front occurred about ten days ago after the verbal dispute by their governments over the Transylvania question.

About 100 men were killed on both sides, the announcer said, and the fight was stopped when the Germans ordered Italian units to separate the factions.

The Fight Over Transylvania

THE BITTER war of words which for some time has been raging on both sides of the Hungarian-Rumanian border is sweet music to Allied ears. But it is still far too early to assume that these Axis satellites are about to fling themselves at each other's throats and thus provide Hitler's enemies with the very pleasant spectacle of a war within the Axis.

NOVER

The chances are at least as great that Hitler, having sedulously fostered Magyar-Rumanian friction, will succeed in using it once again to advance his own malign purposes.

WE MUST REMEMBER that neither Hungary nor Rumania is today a sovereign state.

They both live in the shadow of the Third Reich and in that shadow move and have their being. They enjoy a vestige of nominal sovereignty. But the price they have paid for this meaningless concession to them is to become completely subservient to the Axis.

What little freedom of action Hungary and Rumania enjoy today is subject to the limitations which Hitler can at any moment impose. So the fact that Germany has allowed these Danubian satellites to vent their wrath against one another and make threatening gestures in each other's direction suggests that Hitler is not averse to have all this happen; that he would put an immediate stop to them should the Magyar-Rumanian row begin seriously to interfere with his plans.

IT MUST not be supposed, however, that there is anything resembling stage play in the present flare-up between Admiral Horthy's minions and those of Gen. Antonescu. It is very real.

There never was much love lost between Hungary and Rumania. That was true before Hitler began to spread his tentacles over southeastern Europe. It is even more true now.

Hungary and Rumania are prisoner states. They are being stripped of all their resources by the all-devouring military machine of the Third Reich. They have had to contribute troops to fight Hitler's war on Russia. They are under pressure to provide additional cannon fodder to enable the Wehrmacht to carry out its plans for a spring offensive.

Yet neither the present rulers of Hungary nor those of Rumania can openly lay the blame for their country's tragic plight at Germany's door—where it belongs. To do so would be to condemn themselves as traitors who sold their own and their nation's honor for an unsavory mess of pottage. In the meantime, discontent in both countries is rising. The row over Transylvania offers an outlet for such accumulated Magyar and Rumanian bitterness.

FOR THE TIME BEING this war of words constitutes only a minor embarrassment to the Third Reich, if an embarrassment at all. Hitler can even find some satisfaction in the fact that while Magyar leaders and Rumanian spokesmen are exhausting the vocabulary of abuse on the neighboring country they are fulsome in their pledges of loyalty to the "new order."

The bone of contention between Hungary and Rumania today is the same as it has been for many years—the rich border region known as Transylvania.

Transylvania came into Rumania's possession after the first World War. In the summer of 1940, it was partitioned, with Hungary receiving the northwestern two-fifths. This did not satisfy the Magyars; the Rumanians have never reconciled themselves to the partition. Both sides are determined on getting all of Transylvania. Neither side can attain this goal without the consent and support of the Third Reich, however.

THIS circumstance plays right into Hitler's hands which, no doubt, is as he planned it to be.

On the one hand, Hungary is being threatened with the loss of her portion of Transylvania if she refuses to provide the Magyar soldiers Hitler wants for his spring campaign, and all of Transylvania if she does his bidding. The same combination of promise and threat is being employed to bring Rumania in line. Rumania suffered heavy casualties in the fighting on the Eastern Front, particularly at Odessa. How much more flesh and blood she can still contribute to the Axis is problematical. But the very investment made by Rumania in an Axis triumph may lead General Antonescu to give way to Hitler's demands. And if Rumania does so Hitler would have an additional club to wield over General Horthy's head.

So the Machiavellian game goes on in the Danubian area. There is, as yet, no reason to believe that it will not be played by Hitler in such a manner as to secure what he wants from the satellite states. He needs every man he can get for his spring offensive. If that offensive succeeds he can take care of the Hungarian-Rumanian row without trouble. If it fails the explosion certain to occur in the Danubian area will only be one of many seismic disturbances in Occupied Europe.

Of that failure we cannot yet be sure. That will depend on the Russians. But it will also depend, to no small degree on the British and on us to whom the Russians look for the weapons and supplies they need to help them beat back the Nazi tide for good and all.

Large Majority Favors Conscription of All Single Women from 21 to 35 for War Jobs

By George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., March 26.—As the United States Senate prepares to pass a bill setting up the first Women's Army Auxiliary Corps in the Nation's history a survey by the American Institute of Public Opinion finds that public opinion once again goes beyond its leaders by favoring conscription of all single women between the ages of 21 and 35 for wartime jobs.

Women in the age brackets that would be affected vote almost 4 to 1 in favor of the plan.

While the bill before the Senate provides only for volunteers, the conscription plan to utilize the skills of women is not without precedent. Britain is now conscripting women on a large scale, not only for factory work but for noncombat positions with the armed forces, such as range finding in the antiaircraft batteries. In Russia the women are likewise playing an increasingly important role in the war effort.

To measure American public sentiment on the role of women in war here, the Institute put this issue to a cross-section of voters from coast to coast:

"Would you be in favor of starting now to draft single women between the ages of 21 to 35 to train them for war time jobs?"

Sentiment in favor of this step is remarkably stable. Below are the results of the latest survey, and a comparison with the vote in a similar survey in January:

| | Today | January |
|---|---|---|
| Yes | 69% | 68% |
| No | 23 | 26 |
| Undecided | 8 | 6 |

As was the case in Britain, this country is facing an increasing need for women in industry and other noncombat service as more and more men go into the armed forces. According to a recent study by the Cleveland Trust Co., only about four women in every thousand are employed in war industries at the present itme, as compared with 21 out of every thousand at the end of World War I.

The National Industrial Conference Board likewise finds employment of women in war industries lagging and suggests that a "national labor registry of all women appears necessary."

It is interesting to note that men are less enthusiastic about the idea of conscripting women than women themselves are.

The vote of the men is 10 per cent below that of the women within the conscription age bracket. Those women (ages 21 to 35) vote 75 per cent yes, 18 per cent no, and 6 per cent undecided, while the vote of all men is 66 per cent in favor 27 per cent opposed and 7 per cent undecided.

The high majorities for female conscription are further evidence that the public will be satisfied with nothing short of an "all-out" war effort.

| | Favor. | Against. | Undec. |
|---|---|---|---|
| N. Eng. & M. Atl. | 69% | 23% | 8% |
| E. Cent. | 70 | 22 | 8 |
| W. Cent. | 66 | 24 | 8 |
| South | 72 | 18 | 10 |
| Far West | 69 | 25 | 6 |

Secrecy Sought For Past Of Ex-Convicts In Draft

By the Associated Press

Chicago, March 26.— A pioneer prisoner's aid society today appealed to Selective Service officials "for greater protection" for thousands of rehabilitated former convicts who, in registering, will be compelled to divulge a shadowed past to "a tribunal of neighbors."

Men 45 to 64 years inclusive will register April 27 for noncombatant service.

Barnett Faroll, president of the Central Howard Association, wrote to Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of Selective Service asking correctional measures be taken "so that the hard-earned reputations of many men and their families will be assured protection."

Faroll said a section of the Selective Service regulations specified information concerning a court record was not confidential and that it might be disclosed to any peace officer.

Men who were law violators 20, 30 or even 40 years ago, Faroll wrote, will be asked to reveal "sad mistakes of their youth that have been buried in the long distant past and should never be resurrected," he added:

"Thousands of loyal American men between the ages of 45 and 64 years are frustrated, not because they lack the desire to be of service to their country, but because on that day of registration a chain of events will begin that may, if adequate precautions are not taken in time, tear down years of happy family living, good deeds, and respectable law-abiding life."

Faroll said that in anticipation of registration day, men have "appealed in desperation" to the association which has treated the problems of some 67,000 men and boys in the last 41 years.

Among the hundreds of thousands of former prisoners in the 45-64 age group, Faroll said, there were a great many who have "successfully journeyed that difficult road back to reformation," and have buried their secrets from even their nearest loved ones.

F. Emory Lyon, veteran superintendent of the association, suggested the section should be amended to limit the time involved to the last 10 or 15 years, instead of the entire lifetime. "This section should be made as confidential as the section on income, dependency, and health," he said.

Drug Association Indicted by U. S. On Trust Charge

The Justice Department announced yesterday that a Federal grand jury at Newark, N. J., had indicted the National Association of Retail Druggists, the New Jersey Pharmaceutical Association, 13 smaller New Jersey groups and 15 individuals on a charge of conspiring to violate the Sherman Anti-Trust Act by fixing prices.

The indictment alleged that a conspiracy aimed at fixing the margin of profit on drug-store items by fixing the retail price, and the prices at which the articles were purchased from wholesalers.

To carry this out, it was charged, the defendants acted under the guise of compliance with the Miller-Tydings Act and the New Jersey State Fair Trade Law.

THE LILIES ARE PRETTY, TOO—Ruth Brown, 1526 Ridge Place Southeast, poses with Easter lilies delivered recently to Blackstone Florists, 1407 H Street Northwest

Supply Cut, Easter Lily Prices Soar

The lady with a lily this Easter will be the girl whose man has really shelled out for the symbolic flower. The price per bloom will probably be doubled, from 35 cents to 75 cents, florists said yesterday.

The man concerned with all of this will also expend some shoe leather looking for a lily. There will be only two million real Easter lilies available for American women who, in prewar years, had taken their pick from some 23 million of the flowers.

A prominent florist here said yesterday he believed that Washington would have its lily supply, normally about 50,000 pots averaging five blooms each, reduced this year by about 50 per cent.

This Easter's lily trouble dates from Pearl Harbor. In past years 18 million of the normal 23 million lilies for the United States came from Japan. Further to confound the American corsage, three million lilies might have come from Great Britain, France and Holland. Hitler isn't interested in our getting any bouquets.

The lily requires a peculiarly suited climate and soil. It had not been extensively developed in America—but will be. William N. Craig, of Weymouth, Mass., lily culturist and the flower's foremost authority, told the Associated Press that "in about six years we will be independent of imported lilies."

Only a few thousand bulbs from Japan reached America before Pearl Harbor. Persons able to buy and find lilies can be reasonably sure they're not getting a Japanese product, it was said by authorities. The great bulk sold will be labeled "Grown in America" and will have originated in Louisiana and Oregon, it was pointed out. Some will come from Bermuda, reputed origin of the Easter symbol flower.

The Japanese are said to have seized the lily business about 25 years ago when the Bermuda growers found production slowed by a lily disease.

Mercy Ship— On the eve of the Japanese occupation of Manila, Gen. Douglas MacArthur cabled the American Red Cross asking that a ship evacuate about 200 wounded men of the American-Filipino forces. The freighter Mactan was chartered by cable to do this work. On January 31 the Mactan, flying the Red Cross flag and painted with symbols of mercy, left the Philippines for the long and perilous voyage through turbulent Pacific war zones to Australia with its cargo of wounded and dying. The hastily improvised hospital ship landed in Darwin about the first of February and subsequently disembarked the wounded in Sydney. These pictures were made during the Mactan's safe passage by Irving Williams, Red Crosss field director at Manila. Compared to most of their living quarters here, the workers now in Philly have a virtual palace. They live in cozy apartments replete with living rooms and kitchens. And added to that, the girls say it's easy to get dates. Men workers, however, prefer Washington. One is growing a beard in protest of the shift. Left—SEC employes at work in the auditorium of the former Penn A. C. Center—Row upon row of filing cabinets line the auditorium. Right—Mrs. Elizabeth Wadleigh (left), of Littleton, N. H., knits for the Red Cross in the new apartment of her daughter, Alice, who is relaxing after a day's work.

30-to-80-Cent Rates Proposed Under Calvert Taxicab Plan

Taxi rates under Alfred D. Calvert's proposed six-zone taxi map for the District would be 30, 40, 50, 60, 70 and 80 cents, Calvert told The Post last night.

He justified the change from the present 20-cent jump between zones to a 10-cent one by the additional income the cab driver would get passing through the boundaries of his sub-zones included within the major ones.

Calvert's plan, which was presented to the Lincoln Park Citizens' Association Wednesday night and printed in The Post yesterday, would divide the city into six zones, designed in concentric-like circles, but using well-known thoroughfares as boundaries rather than arbitrarily mathematical ones. Each zone but the center one would be partitioned into subzones, and to cross from one into another of these within the same major zone would boost the fare 10 cents.

Such a system, Calvert said, would be the best compromise between a zone and a meter system that could be worked out.

Under the present taxi system, adopted ("unscientifically," according to Public Utilities Commissioner Gregory Hankin) in 1931, it is possible for a passenger to ride as far as 9 miles for 30 cents, or to have to pay 80 cents for riding only a few blocks.

Calvert's plan divides the city into 18 sections of approximately the same area and population basis. Therefore, he said, all rides of the same length would cost about the same.

While Calvert's plan has received only approval, so far as it has received comment, Calvert reported that neither taxi nor Public Utilities Commission officials had anything one way or the other to say about it.

The Public Utilities Commission is working on a new zone map and rate plan of its own, and taxi company officials have been consulted in the drawing up of the new schedule before a public hearing is called.

Get You a Wife Who Weaves And Wear Hand-Loomed Suits

MODERN WEAVER—Mrs. Paul Nelson shown with the loom set up in her apartment and one of her husband's suits for which she wove the cloth

When Paul Nelson, 1608 East-West Highway, an architect consultant with the USHA, thinks about a new suit of clothes (which isn't often, as will be explained), he thinks only of first sources, the sheep, and what colors he wants.

When Nelson puts on a suit, it's good to last four, five, six, seven years because Mrs. Nelson decides what wool ought to go in it and then weaves the cloth on a giant loom in the living room of the Nelson apartment.

A French woman and married to the American architect during his long residence in France before the war began, Mrs. Nelson acquired the weaver's art as a hobby. She can turn out the cloth, in the lovely color tones her husband selects, in about two weeks.

Those interested in the practice won't find any money saving there. To begin with, a loom and what has to go with it will cost about $300. Then one has to learn to weave and some never do. Other acquire the art very fast. In any event, the wool for a two-trouser suit will cost about $45. After that a tailor must be employed to build the suit from the woven cloth and the cost of that depends on what street the tailor's shop is on.

Byrd Supports Darden Stand On Camp Labor

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., March 26.—Senator Harry F. Byrd agreed with Gov. Darden today that if the Federal Employment Service was using its office to force or influence persons to join unions, it was a practice "about which something should be done."

He told a Richmond newsman by telephone that he was "very much against the principle Gov. Darden complained of "at the Camp Pickett construction project near Blackstone, and said that he would talk with the Governor on the matter at Norfolk where both spoke before the Maritime Exchange tonight.

The Governor, in a statement Tuesday night, charged the employment service was being used as a recruiting agency for the unions and that he had learned that contrary to his previous information only men who were union members or joined unions were being permitted to work on the project.

This, he said, was in violation of the construction contract and constituted an "unconscionable prostitution" of the purpose for which the employment service was formed.

Staples Reports Today

Attorney General A. P. Staples was requested by the Governor to determine whether the State had authority to interfere with this situation and also whether the "constructive" session of the General Assembly meeting here Saturday could take up new business—an indication the Governor might have some State legislation in mind. Staples probably will report to the Governor upon his return from Norfolk tomorrow.

Representative Howard W. Smith, of the Eighth Virginia District, said he would confer with Senator Byrd upon his return to Washington and also would talk with Gov. Darden regarding the Blackstone situation.

"I got a letter yesterday," he said, "from another section of the country to which it was complained that there the employment service would not see a man until after he had registered with the union and paid a $2 fee. This will certainly be worth looking into along with the things Gov. Darden brought up."

Meanwhile, Lieut. M. C. Fox, Army engineer on the 29-million-dollar project, said it was immaterial to him whether the contractor handled the work with union or non-union men.

"All I ask is for him to bring in the labor as it is needed, and up to the present time there has been a sufficient number of workmen," he declared.

"We are ahead of schedule, and that is the main thing in which I am interested.

"What agreements exist between the contractor and the union or between the union and the United States Employment Service do not interest me. I only want to get the work done."

Lieut. Fox said approximately 12,000 men were employed at Blackstone now. Of these, he estimated that about 30 per cent were common labor and most of this group were non-union.

Gov. Darden said he was informed that closed shop agreements were in effect for electrical and asbestos workers and preferential shops for other craftsmen, but that the referral by the Employment Service of job applicants to the unions instead of to the contractor had the effect of making it an all-around closed shop.

Citizens Urge 300 New Firemen for D. C.

A resolution urging Congress and the District Commissioners to add 300 firemen to the District Fire Department was adopted last night by the MacArthur Road Citizens Association.

A fire committee, appointed to study the question, asserted that in spite of the rapid growth of Washington, the fire department now has 30 less men than in 1928.

Dean Morse Recommended As East, Gulf Waterfront Boss

Appointment of Wayne Lyman Morse, dean of the University of Oregon Law School, as waterfront "czar" of East Gulf ports has been recommended by President Roosevelt to the War Shipping Administration but is being opposed by A. F. of L. and shipowner sources, it was reliably reported yesterday.

Admiral Emory S. Land, head of the War Shipping Administration, has not yet acted on Morse's appointment, although the suggestion was made early this week.

Morse, a public member of the National War Labor Board, was recently appointed to control stevedoring and longshore operations in Pacific Coast ports. Mr. Roosevelt has urged that the scope of his duties be expanded to cover all American ship loading operations.

Opposition to the establishment of a longshore control board on the East Coast is reported to center in Joseph Ryan, head of the A. F. of L. International Longshoremen's Association, which operates the notorious "shape-up" system in hiring stevedores.

Ryan is said to fear that this system would be replaced by Government hiring halls for longshoremen if a control board under Morse were appointed.

Under the "shape-up," dockworkers assemble each day on different wharves hoping for employment. They are then picked for work by officials of the I. L. A. It is charged that this system is inefficient in recruiting labor, inasmuch as too many employment seekers may gather on a given day at one dock and insufficient at another.

Under the shakeup, it is alleged, the jobs sometimes are awarded on the basis of the union officials' choice.

Ryan has recently been under fire on charges that some of his key union hiring officials have close Axis connections, and that the shapeup system provides no check on the employment of potential saboteurs or enemy agents who would thus have access to the ships being loaded.

Certain shipowners are said to be supporting Ryan in his opposition to the creation of a Government supervising board, contending that the project is Communist-supported or that it would lead to Communist domination of the waterfront.

Creation of such a board with Morse at its head was advocated yesterday by Joseph Curran, president of the National Maritime Union, before the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee.

Curran charged that carelessness and inefficiency in loading ships had resulted in delays in shipping and the actual loss of many lives and much cargo.

Citing from more than 90 affidavits of seamen, Curran said, that five ships had been obliged to turn back to East Coast ports to be reloaded after the cargoes had shifted at sea, that a sixth had been torpedoed and lost when it was forced to leave its convoy and return to port to be reloaded, and that a seventh, loaded 10 inches above the plimsoll mark, was lost in a storm when the deck cargo shifted.

An eighth vessel, Curran said, has been given up as lost.

Delectable Egg Dishes Given by Contestants; Glamorous Entrees Suggested in Balanced Menus

THE HENS must be very proud these days. Every time they lay eggs and cackle they are saying there are nice fresh eggs for breakfast—in the Army, in the Navy, in the Marines, in the Air Corps, and in the homes of the people standing back of them.

Eggs should always be included in the daily diet (one or two a day) for they furnish those essential nutrients—protein, fat, vitamins and minerals. That leaves no doubt that they are a food that is shoulder to shoulder for national vitality, for these nutrients offer body-building nerve-steadying, teeth and bone developing, and blood-making qualities. That's quite a contribution for one food.

The abundance of fresh, fine quality eggs at this season makes the prices more thrifty. And the thoughtful homemaker with an eye to good nutrition and her fingers on the food budget will serve eggs in some form regularly.

Post recipe contestants in this month's contest give suggestions for using eggs in a way that fairly make meals sparkle. There's a delightful flair of imagination in their winning recipes.

Mrs. Robert E. Burns, 2480 Sixteenth Street Northwest, winner of the first prize of $3, might also be awarded a prize for her practical knowledge of psychology. Besides hewing to the contest theme—What Glamorous Dishes Can You Make From Eggs—Mrs. Burns knows the effect of color in meals. A colorless meal might taste perfectly good to a blind man but it wouldn't have an appeal to an observing person. Mrs. Burnss' winning menu has eye as well as taste, appeal. It was accomplished in a natural way, and not through such fancy frills as putting pink pantalets on lamb chops or such immoral food practice as a banana made into a candle for salad.

The following is Mrs. Burns' winning menu and recipe for the fish dish that would be especially welcome for a Lenten meal or any time you want to serve simple food with an eye for appearance and flavor appeal.

Luncheon Menu

Baked Cream Halibut
with Cream Sauce
Potato Chips Green Peas
Mixed Vegetable Salad
Pecan Rolls Butter
Lemon Angel Pie
Tea Coffee

With the excellent halibut we now have in market, both frozen and in the frosted foods, the halibut is a natural to prepare in the Lenten season. The winning recipe follows:

Baked Cream Halibut—Buy 1 pound halibut and grind fine. Prepare 1 pint enriched bread crumbs. Scald together 1 cup evaporated milk and 1 cup skimmed milk. To the milk add the bread crumbs, the ground halibut, 1 teaspoon ground parsley and salt and pepper and onion salt to taste. Beat 5 egg whites stiff and fold them into the mixture. Put in a greased casserole and bake in a preheated oven, at 350 degrees for 45 minutes. Serves 6 persons.

Serve with cream sauce made by following recipe:

Cream Sauce—Melt 4 tablespoons butter and blend in 2 tablespoons flour. Add 1½ cups top milk or light cream and salt, pepper, onion salt and paprika to taste. Let boil for 2 to 3 minutes. serve with fish.

Mrs. Pauline T. Crow, 1910 T Street Southeast, winner of the second prize of $2, suggests a menu that is ideal for either a Lenten luncheon or dinner. The winning menu and recipe for the entree follow:

Lenten Luncheon Menu

Creamed Eggs and Shrimp
in Noodle Ring
Vegetable Fritters
Beet Salad
Pineapple Sherbet Lady Fingers
Coffee

Eggs and shrimp in a noodle ring is a dish that will win any woman a reputation as a glamour cook. The one that Mrs. Crow includes in her Lenten menu is such and the recipe for it follows:

Creamed Eggs and Shrimp—Make a white sauce of 3 tablespoons butter, 3 tablespoons flour, 1½ cups milk, ½ teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper and ⅛ teaspoon paprika. Add 1 tablespoon chopped capers, 4 hard-cooked eggs, sliced and 1½ cups cooked shrimp. Be sure to remove the black stringy portion of the shrimp. Reheat carefully without boiling. Serve in noodle ring made as follows:

Noodle Ring—Boil 1 package broken noodles in salted water until tender. Drain. Saute 1 small minced onion, 1 tablespoon chopped green pepper and 1 cup canned mushrooms in 2 tablespoons butter. Add 3 egg yolks, well beaten, and ½ cup milk after removing from the fire. Stir in 1 cup tomato puree or thick soup, ½ teaspoon salt and ⅛ teaspoon pepper, 1 cup grated cheese and the boiled noodles. Fold in 3 egg whites, stiffly beaten. Pour into a greased ring mold, set in pan of hot water and bake in moderate oven, 350 degrees for about 45 minutes. Serves 6.

Miss Martha Ryan, 1627 Thirty-fifth Street Northwest, winner of a $1 prize also keeps the Lenten season in mind in planning her winning menu. Eggs with lobster go into the main dish. The entire menu is very seasonal and just the kind you will want to use for some special guests. The winning menu and egg dish recipe follow:

Buffet Supper Menu

Cheese Crisps Tomato Juice
Buffet Eggs with Lobster Sauce
Broccoli Timbales
Celery Hearts Stuffed Olives
Chicory Salad
Hot Buttered Biscuits
Strawberry Meringue Shortcake
Coffee

Shellfish team with eggs to make a glorious dish for which Miss Ryan gives the following recipe:

Buffet Eggs with Lobster Sauce—Chop together 2 cups cooked lobster, 2 cups cooked crab meat, 1 cup cooked shrimp, 1 cup cooked oysters. Blend 2 beaten eggs with ¼ tablespoon cream. Season with 1½ teaspoons salt, ½ teaspoon pepper. ½ teaspoon paprika, 1 teaspoon mustard and 2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce. Cut 24 hard-cooked eggs in halves lengthwise, remove the yolks and reserve for other purposes. Fill the halves with the seafood mixture. Arrange on a platter with toast points. Pour the lobster sauce over and serve at once. Garnish with a few of the egg yolks pressed through a coarse sieve.

Lobster Sauce—Make a sauce of 6 tablespoons flour, 6 tablespoons butter and 3 cups cream. Add 2 tablespoons lobster coral and 1 cup cooked diced lobster. Season highly with salt and pepper and cook over hot water for 15 minutes.

Applause for Eggs

There's a surprising lot of value and beauty wrapped up in an eggshell. Eggs have other qualifications, too, but the dishes pictured here—baked stuffed eggs and salmon, and hard-cooked eggs in spinach nest with cheese sauce—are two good reasons for convincing anyone that they can be served other than in the prosaic fried manner for breakfast or hard-cooked to go to a picnic

Miraculous Soybean Brings Variety, Vitamins, Vigor to Diet

By The Post Food Editor

GARDENERS who have a spot they can devote to the miraculous soybean should certainly do so. And the budget-minded and health-conscious woman who is on the alert for ways to offset rising food prices and also serve nutritious dishes that bring variety into the all too conventional diet, should consider this little legume.

Why should we consider the soybean seriously? Not for one good reason, but for many. They are high in protein, but low in starch, that is why the medical profession recommends soybeans for the starch-restricted diet. Where ordinary navy beans contain 20 per cent starch, the soybean contains only a small amount of utilizable starch. That makes them fine for the weight-reducing person.

Tips to Weight Reducers

This legume is 12 times as rich in fat as other beans and a source of vitamins. Green soybeans are rich in vitamin A and both the dry and green ones are good sources of vitamin B and G. And if the soybean is sprouted in the Oriental fashion, vitamin C will also be present. Green-shelled soybeans rank with kale and squash as one of the 6½ per cent carbohydrate vegetables, while the dry soybeans count as a 12 per cent vegetable.

To the venturesome cook, soybeans offer many possibilities, especially after they have been put through a food grinder or coarse sieve. Soybean pulp, combined with milk, eggs, sugar and spices, go to make up a flavorsome pie. The pulp may be used in making soups, croquettes, souffle or soybean loaf. Green soybeans are a very good salad vegetable after boiling or chilling. It should be remembered that since soybeans are rich in fat, only enough should be added for flavor.

Soybean products are available in many forms. Soybean flour, because it is practically starch-free and lends itself to many uses, may be made into palatable bread, pancakes, muffins and other breadstuffs that appeal to the appetite. This flour is valuable in the diet because it is alkaline in reaction, helping to neutralize excess acid in the system. Soybean flour blended with gluten flour produces a palatable bread. Some food companies prepare soybeans ready to serve, enhanced with the addition of a savory tomato sauce.

Soybean Casserole—Cook 1 cup soybeans and mash. Chop small onion fine. Chop celery to make ½ cupful. Mix together 1 tablespoon soy flour, ¼ cup tomato juice and ¼ teaspoon vegetable salt. Blend all the ingredients together and bake in casserole well oiled for 40 minutes at 350 to 400 degrees.

Salad Survey Finds Calavo On Top of List

Here's news straight from the nutritional front. Lists of the salad foods that we eat every day were made recently. The idea was to rate each salad ingredient for its important iron and phosphorus values, as well as for vitamins A, B1, C, and G. The group of lists, which made up what might be called a chart, showed up one fact that should be quite disturbing to the vegetable family.

It was a fruit—Calavo pears—that walked away with most of the honors by appearing high in each list of ten of the most high ratings. In fact, the Calavo topped the list high in iron values, appeared second on the vitamin B1 and vitamin G list, and was a runner-up in third place in the list for phosphorus content. Moreover, the Calavo topped all the list of salad ingredients in its food energy values.

Chicken Pie Takes Airs

Chicken pie from those few extra pieces of chicken or turkey is entirely possible for the small family, especially if there's chicken gravy also. You'll need a cup of cubed cooked chicken. Add equal proportions of diced carrots or canned peas and increase the richness of the chicken flavor with a half-cup portion of chopped ripe olives.

Take advantage of the ready-prepared chopped form, or slice the fruit from the pits of medium-size ripe olives. Blend ingredients and season as you like. Pour into a buttered casserole and top with thinly rolled biscuits. Bake at biscuit temperature—450 degrees F.—until biscuits are baked and brown.

G.O.P. War Aid Is Pledged By Kelland

Clarence Buddington Kelland's office, which he didn't seek," has windows overlooking Lafayette Park and he looks down on the thousands of hurrying people there—Government people in the New Deal Capital—and reflects on "the tremendous resentment everywhere over wasted money."

Washington bewilders him. He came here Monday from Phoenix, Ariz., where everything is pretty much as it meets the eyes, to take his unasked-for-position of executive director of the Republican National Committee with two fixed positions of mind:

1. The Nation needs two political parties.

2. "The Republican Party will give the President such cooperation in his war effort as in his most optimistic moment he never even expected from his own party."

But it Will Criticize

With the abruptness, however, of a pigeon's sudden flight from the park sidewalk below, a qualifying "but" is spoken.

Kelland doesn't mean the party won't criticize. "There are no parties so far as the war effort is concerned. But we will preserve our integrity as a party. We're not going out of business," he said.

And in business, his eyes open on the cross-country trip here, he observed "discontent." He said he detected "dissatisfaction with the progress of the war effort. People are feeling humiliation at the thought of being kicked around as we were by the Japanese. We are not used to being pushed around this way and there seems to be a general feeling that someone is to blame."

"There is a tremendous resentment against wasted money," he said, reflecting that the Government has some 30,000 press agents when "the people want the facts" of what's going on. "There's a distrust of appointees. The people feel that the right men have not been appointed to do the job in a good many cases," he said.

Couldn't Find Apathy

"There is a strong feeling that much is being done for political purpose rather than for the good of the country." There is a resentment because the labor difficulties haven't been composed, he stated.

But he didn't see any apathy. "All I could find were people who wanted to do something to help, to fight this war to a finish. But they want leadership in which they can have confidence.

"They want to be assured that the leadership is intelligent and is doing all that can be done." He had noted a feeling that there has been "not enough delegation of authority to men who are competent to manage production and see that the stuff is delivered promptly. There is a desire for speed and immediate action," he related.

He said the people want to know that their money is going for plane parts "and not for fan dancers."

Hasn't Changed a Bit

Kelland still wears his well-tailored plaids and bow ties; his lined face is still an any-moment character study for photographers, his eyes are flashy as ever and he hasn't forgotten a one of those picturesque words he emphasizes with. Sudden political office hasn't changed Clarence Buddington Kelland. Of holding office he says:

"I want to stay here only so long as I'm needed," which some in his hearing thought to be the strangest thing an office-holder ever said in Washington.

Little Shaver Cites Feminine Influence in Razor Curb

Miss Christine Sadler,
Washington Post Staff Writer,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Miss Sadler: Ten days ago, in this paper, you made a dour feminine comment to the effect that the war has brought about a situation in which men—War Production Board textile officials, specifically—now have the driver's seat in the designing of women's clothes. They were, you pointed out, in charge of conserving materials and in that role could release their long-repressed inhibitions and finally could become the bosses of specifications for women's wear.

If this were, as you intimated, a victory for the male sex, it was short-lived. Your team evened the score last week. An investigation yesterday revealed that the person responsible for ordering the reduction in razor blade production is a woman. Her name is Miss Florence Swire. She is the WPB business analyst who surveyed the whisker situation from chin to sideburn and came up with the razor blade curtailment order.

Interviewed yesterday, Miss Swire indicated she was none too happy about the grief her order seems to have caused in the male population. If Delilah was such a this-and-a-that for cutting the male whiskers, why should a gal catch the dickens for trying to make amends, she argues.

Actually, she insists, there are going to be plenty of blades. The order permits the manufacture of 2,400,000,000 blades a year, or just as many as in 1940 and 3½ times as many as the men seemed to get along with in 1932. The one blade a week figure that has caused so much consternation, she explains, refers only to the rate of production and fails to take into account the Nation's stockpile of new blades, which is terrific.

Further, Miss Swire contends (the babe has the figures on the whisker chopping business down cold), the guys in the Army, who are certainly no less hirsute than civilians, make one razor do for six or seven shaves. That's because they only have $21 a month to spend. Fellows who insist on a new blade for each session with the lather are either just plain extravagant or else their mother was scared by a package of steel wool.

Miss Swire, fool for curtailing, is about to lay into hairpins, hair curlers, permanent wave apparatus, etc. Limitation orders for these items are coming up soon. What's less sauce for the gander, she says, should be less sauce for the goose.

Personally Miss Swire likes her men clean shaven and says anybody who lets his beard grow on the grounds he can't get razor blades is just alibing for a suppressed desire or laziness.

Yours,
ALFRED FRIENDLY.

Randolph Asks D. C. Hospital Aid Be Speeded

Representative Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, chairman of the House District Committee, last night urged Congressional speed in enacting legislation to provide District hospitals with greater bed capacities.

His request for speed came while George Dirkes, a 61-year-old war worker, lay critically ill of pneumonia in Alexandria Hospital after efforts to place him in a District institution had failed because there was no bed space.

"The unfortunate situation facing Mr. Dirkes is a further indication of the severe shortage of beds in the hospitals serving the District," Representative Randolph said.

"I hope there will be speedy agreement between House and Senate conferees on the District housing bill which carries a provision increasing the hospital facilities in Washington."

The measure, which in its Senate version provides funds for approximately 2100 more beds in local hospitals, is due to go to conference next week.

The need for additional bed space was presented by representatives of before the House District Committee all local hospitals several weeks ago tee.

Physicians at Alexandria Hospital said last night that Dirkes, who was employed on the new War Department building in Arlington County, was expected to pass the crisis with the hospital Wednesday after he had in three days. He was admitted to failed to gain admission to institutions in both Fairfax County, where he resides, and in the District.

President Will Register With Draft Board 9, Along With Other 'Oldsters,' on April 27

Although legally exempt, as commander in chief of the armed forces, President Roosevelt will sign up at Washington Local Board No. 9 with the 45 to 64 age group he recently described as the "oldsters," which will register on April 27, White House officials disclosed yesterday.

Commenting on the President's decision, White House aides said that the President preferred to have the regular local board register him instead of Selective Service bigwigs, and that his example would be of "tremendous value in uplifting the morale of the American people."

Meanwhile, Washington Selective Service officials announced that the District Board of Appeals had reviewed 24 cases, rejected 14 appeals, referred 1, a conscientious objector, to the Attorney General's office, sent 2 back to the local boards for further consideration and approved 7.

Seven of the appeals reviewed by the board were requests for occupational deferment and of the seven only three were approved. Those approved are: Albin F. Czajowski, clerk in the War Department; Lawrence Charry, mechanic, Republic Aviation Corporation, and John Edgar Absher, chemistry laboratorian.

Those refused are: Thompson R. Fulton, employe, Department of Labor; Reno F. DiPetro, employe, Navy Yard; Paul E. Lehman, clerk, United States Civil Service Commission, and Charles Landon Gardner, clerk, United States Civil Service Commission.

At the same time, William E. Leahy, director of District Selective Service, announced another group of Washington registrants to be inducted into the armed forces today at Camp Lee, Va. The inductees and the boards from which they are being sent are:

One Recital Held at Arts Club, Another Is in Pierce Hall

Arts Club of Washington presents Kay Rickert and Helen McGraw in a recital of sonatas for violin and piano on Thursday night. Program: Partita (Loeffler), Sonata in A minor, Op. 23 (Beethoven), Sonata in B minor (Respighi).

Jean Westbrook, violinist, and Everett Stevens, pianist, give a joint recital Thursday night in Pierce Hall. Program: Sonata in D minor, Op. 108 (Brahms), Sonata in E major (Hindemith), Sonatina (Stevens), Piece en forme de habanera (Ravel), Scherzo (Lalo), Sonatinas in C minor, C major and B minor (Scarlatti).

Four young resident artists divided critical attention as well as the allegiance of friends by selecting Thursday night as the date for two joint recitals. At the Arts Club, Kay Rickert, of the National Symphony Orchestra, and her perennial piano companion, Helen McGraw, played three sonatas for the enjoyment of members and guests, while Jean Westbrook and Everett Stevens in Pierce Hall pleased a sizable audience with a mixed program of sonatas and solo pieces. The only listeners who lost something by this simultaneity were the reporters who had to taxi between the points of attraction.

Brown

Charles Martin Loeffler's seldom-heard Partita was the work with which the Misses Rickert and McGraw began their recital. One reason why it is on the list of rarities may be that it requires exceptional qualities of interpretation for its adequate disclosure. For all its skill in constructive form, it is introspective music and to a certain extent autobiographical. Loeffler was a transplanted composer, an Alsatian who lived in Russia and Hungary before taking permanent root in America. The Partita shows traces of these migrations in the colors and moods of the three movements.

Opening gravely in the beautiful Intrada, it changes into a joyous allegro of highly individual content, full of surprises in thematic modifications and modulations of harmony. The Sarabanda is ingeniously built as variations on a fine theme by Johann Mattheson, of Hamburg (1681-1764). The concluding Divertissement is a charming and lively fantasia imbued with the "blues" of the composer's adopted country.

Miss Rickers, whose poised and certain technique is the medium for a full and eloquent tone, was ably seconded by Miss McGraw in an engrossing performance. The two players were in complete accord about the phrasing and dynamics, and their reading penetrated the meaning of the music with rewarding insight. It was with regret that one departed without hearing their treatment of Beethoven's fourth sonata and the poetic B minor sonata by Respighi.

The novelty on the program offered by Jean Westbrook and Everett Stevens was Paul Hindemith's E major sonata for violin and piano, which to the best of my knowledge had not been played here before. Because it is oversimplified and too deliberately unpretentious, it is not one of Hindemith's best works. E major may be the key around which the cheerful arabesques are woven, but the ear is never quite certain as to the tonality.

The collaborators opened their recital with Brahms' D minor sonata, and closed it with Mr. Stevens' buoyant and fresh sonatina which they played here at their previous appearance some time ago. As a composer, Mr. Stevens has imagination and fervor as well as a deft sense of tonal values, and these qualities are immanent in his playing.

I bully, push and cheat and bluff
To show other drivers that I am tough,
I honk my horn at all in sight,
And all pedestrians I affright,
Yet I carry—it seems most singular—

Today's Social Notes

(From the Truthtown Torch.)

A series of morale and birthday parties is saving Truthtown's leisure class from the Lenten doldrums.

"While I am not at all in the party mood I feel it my duty to be gay," explained Mrs. Atterbury Husk, who gave a large dinner last night at the Hotel Swank. "If we let down for a minute on our entertaining, the Japs will think we are licked."

Mrs. Casimer Chives contributed to the pre-Easter morale by being hostess to about 500 friends yesterday afternoon at a surprise birthday party for herself. On Wednesday Mrs. Stuveysant Mixmaster entertained at a large tea in honor of her husband's birthday. Mr. Mixmaster unfortunately was detained at his office and could not attend. The Alexander Rhumbas, just back from Palm Beach, entertained Tuesday night at the Jungle Gardens Night Club in honor of the first birth anniversary of their son Buster. The guest of honor did not attend.

Mrs. Parvenu Popinjay is sacrificing her spring vacation in order to continue her blackout parties. "While I need the rest badly," said Mrs. Popinjay," yet I feel that my place is right here entertaining on the home front."

Patriotic Gardeners

Local notables are rallying enthusiastically to the defense garden movement. Many leading dowagers will send their gardeners to the class in vegetable culture to be conducted each Monday at the Plush Sofa Club, and it is understood that, on many estates, tomatoes and cabbage and even spinach will be grown along with prize dahlias and tulips.

Mrs. Roderick Rutabaga, chairman of the Patriotic Garden Volunteers, said yesterday she had received a telegram from Mrs. Badminton Bellwether offering the services of the Ladies Parachute Patrol to help oversee the vegetable gardening activities of the gardeners on the various estates. (The Parachute Patrol is now drilling at Palm Beach, but will return to Truthtown soon, as the Florida season is ending.)

"In fact," said Mrs. Rutabaga, "some of our members have volunteered to remain in town at least until July to oversee the vegetable gardens their gardeners plant."

Cause for Divorce

Artemus Dodge Hermitt, prominent man among men, has brought suit for divorce from Anne Marchmont Hermitt, prominent club leader, on grounds of extreme cruelty. Mr. Hermitt alleges that his wife inveigled him into attending a dinner at her club at which he understood many other men—or at least several—were to be present, and that he found himself the only man among 69 women. He thereby, he alleges, suffered great mental embarrassment and frustration, and in addition found himself the butt of so many jokes that he has not been able since to carry on his business with proper self-confidence. Mr. Hermitt also alleges that a fashion show, of which he had not been warned in advance, was part of the program.

The Parliamentarians

The Women of Tomorrow, Inc., is engaged in controversy over whether or not to send representatives to the "America On the Offense" mass meeting scheduled for a week from Monday night.

"The club voted at its October meeting to support defense," explained Mrs. Curleycue Primm, president, "but we are not sure that our resolution applies also to offense. Much as we indorse the more militant movement in which our country is now engaged, we would not want to do anything that is unparliamentary."

Mrs. Primm said a special parliamentary committee of the defense subcommittee of the committee on club activities was studying the matter and would report back to the club.

'Streamlined Tradition' Is Rule In Weddings of Defense Brides

This bride illustrates the trend toward sticking to tradition with an eye for practicality. She has chosen a chalk-white long silk jersey frock with shirred cording and wears flowers on her head in a hat of shell pink carnations with two purple iris blossoms added for color accent. Her engagement ring is a medium-sized brilliant-cut diamond set with three small stones on either side. The gift from her lieutenant (j. g.) is a diamond shield set with a single pear-shaped diamond

WARTIME may have its disadvantages, but it certainly puts many a young girl on the marriageable list. There has been a 50 per cent increase in marriages this year over last, according to Mrs. Alexandra Potts, merchandise director of Bride's Magazine, who was at a local store this week.

MRS. POTTS

Mrs. Potts, who has covered 11,000 miles from coast to coast helping families and stores to solve bridal problems that have arisen today, has found that the defense bride is the largest group in the 12,000 or so odd marriages that have taken place within a 50-mile radius of Washington. "The defense bride," says Mrs. Potts, "is the girl who could not afford to get married before the war. Now that she has a defense job they are able to finance it."

Brides Tradition-Conscious

Whether marrying into the armed forces (service weddings make up one-third of the marriages), or into other defense industries, this expert has found brides are generally "tradition"-conscious. "They are eager to hold to inherited social customs. Eighty-two per cent of the brides today have married formally, with conservatism and restraint," said Mrs. Potts.

While brides stick to tradition, they have also become slightly streamlined in their attire. Mrs. Potts pointed out that it has almost become a fashion for the bride of today to have a shortened dress and veil. A long train on a dress has virtually become a thing of the past, except in a few very elaborate weddings. Nostalgia for older traditions still prevails, however, in the use of heirloom lace. Mrs. Potts says to use old lace, by all means—if you have any.

"Fashions have taken on degrees of formality," said this bridal authority. "Today a girl can be married formally in a less formal dress than was proper at one time. She may also be married informally in anything from a floor-length gown to a suit length," said Mrs. Potts. "While satin is still popular, changes are also taking place in the wedding fabrics, with sheers becoming more fashionable. Cotton dotted swiss and organza will also be seen."

In these uncertain times Mrs. Potts has found that it is not at all uncommon for a girl to have only three days to prepare for her wedding. With this wartime regime, here are a few of the problems that have arisen:

Wedding Considerations

1. What to do about invitations. With only three days ahead instead of three months, a girl cannot send out printed invitations; therefore it is now acceptable to send a special delivery letter, wire or phone her guests. Right after the marriage, however, she should send out announcements to confirm the wedding—a most important item, since many weddings have to be called off at the last minute.

2. How formal or informal to be. With men in uniform, businessmen say they feel strange wearing even their dinner jackets. It is advised that an evening wedding to which one might have more than 300 guests be switched to afternoon so that women may come in "short" and men in business suits.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Young Couple Have Mutual Friend, an Older Man, Also Married, Who Openly Pursues and Makes Love To Wife; Unable to Quell Him, She Asks Advice

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My husband and I have a mutual friend whom we see quite frequently at the club, etc. He is a great deal older than we, and lately he thinks he has fallen in love with me. He insists on following me around, meeting me for lunch, etc., despite my asking him not to. At dances at the club, he drinks quite a lot and then states in a loud voice how much he loves me, and that he is going to marry me.

All this, in front of his friends and mine, is very embarrassing. He, also, is married and has a very attractive family. I don't want his wife or his friends,—or mine,—to think I have in any way encouraged this feeling in him. I have asked him, to no avail, please not even to come around me. But he keeps on insisting that he is in love with me and I with him. Please advise me what to do. G. J.

DEAR G. J.: Ridicule, mockery, scorn, boredom and faint (or even marked) distaste are the most effective attitudes to employ, in getting control of this situation. In protesting that you don't love this aging fool; and that he musn't say,—or even think,—that he loves you, you are dignifying his screwball performance with serious treatment.

Tell Him, 'There's No Fool Like an Old Fool'

SOMETIMES, one must be (or seem to be) cruel in order to be kind. And it seems you are facing that necessity here. Thus, at the first possible opportunity, you might say to him, in a coldly furious aside. "You make me believe in the proverb: 'There is no fool like an old fool.' Don't you realize you are making yourself ridiculous, running after me? Why, you're old enough to be my father, at least; although the way you've been acting, some people might think you were 90 and in your dotage. So I love you, do I? —and just don't know it. What utter rot! The only feeling I have toward you is pity for your wife —and it's getting stronger by the minute. How she puts up with you, I wouldn't know."

Or the next time he announces to the world, in a loud and drunken voice, that he loves you and is going to marry you, you might sweep the company with an ironic eye, while lazily lifting your right forefinger to your temple and rotating it there,—in the gesture which signifies, "So-and-So is nuts." Or you might drawl, "What you need, George, is a keeper; not another wife."

Your complaint that he thrusts himself on you for lunch is a bit too wide-eyed. He couldn't join you if he didn't know where you were lunching. And he wouldn't know, if you were determined to keep it a secret. Now, don't argue that you lunch one favorite place—as he well knows. There are restaurants all over town; and you can ask your hostess (if you're lunching in someone's home) to say you're "not here," if this crackpot calls. If it's a case of lunching near your place of work (supposing you're a jobholder) you can give up the practise 'til the storm blows over—and have somebody smuggle a daily sandwich in.

You say you have implored him, "to no avail, please not even to come around you." All right, then, discard the persecuted ingenue role, which ill becomes your wifely status. Take the offensive in putting him to rout. When he comes near you, give him the icy treatment. Cut him dead; turn your back on him; walk off. If he corners you with a group, be as blandly inattentive to his presence as though he were a disembodied spirit. Look through him and talk past him; and "ditch" him suavely and briskly at the earliest maneuverable moment, by breaking away with such indisputable pretexts as "Oh, there's Sara. I've been wanting to see her. Excuse me, will you?" (This to the group.) Or, "I must find John. He asked me to keep an eye on him this evening—." Etc.

If he hurries after you, demanding attention, sweep him aside with scornful flippancy. Say, "On your way, Casanova, on your way. I came here tonight to enjoy myself; not to be bored to death." And, if she will permit it, be at all times especially gracious to his wife—implying friendly respect and affection for her, while nonchalantly frowning him down. M. H.

Use Old Jet Beads

If grandma has any extra jet beads, run quick and have them strung. They're good again. June Havoc, for her role in RKO Radio's new musical, "Sing Your Worries Away," wears a chalk white evening gown with a long necklace of jet beads. Necklace is looped round her throat four times, twice at choker length, twice in loops a few inchse longer. Dress, incidentally, is a long sheath, almost hobble skirt style, slashed up from the hemline.

Glass Offers Great Promise In Textile Field

Glass fabric is still an infant in the textile field, but keep your eye on it! Formerly it was used only as an insulating material but rerent experimentation has proven it satisfactory for draperies, curtains, tablecloths and ties, to mention only a few of the new uses to which it has been put.

The manufacture of fabric from glass reveals one wonder after another. It is from flawless glass marbles that glass fioers 15 times finer than human hair are made. Making thread from these delicate filaments gives us a further idea of their filminess. Ordinarily it requires over 200 of these filaments to make a single thread of glass for weaving! One of the chief advantages possessed by glass fabrics is their fire-proof quality. This, along with resistance to soil, makes them especially suitable for draperies and curtains.

Lively Walk Daily Is Beauty Tonic for Career Woman

By Ida Jean Kain

THE CAREER women who have to keep fit and beautiful, too, are the ones who have it down to a system. Almost without exception they have some form of vigorous outdoor activity on which they rely to replenish their vitality, offset strain and serve as a beauty tonic.

One of the most radiantly lovely celebrities I have interviewed is Margaret Speaks, distinguished concert and radio soprano. As a routine, Miss Speaks does nothing more than walk—but she doesn't amble along. Her idea of walking is a 10-mile jaunt, come rain or shine, up hill and down dale.

Walking happens to be her hobby. But you could do worse than to take it up as a means of regular exercise. It is cheap and an excellent conditioner. If you are not used to walking, don't fancy yourself in a class with Miss Speaks. Start off with a moderate two or three miles a day for the first week or so, and ease into a more strenuous stretch. And don't try country hiking in high heels. They'll throw you. Wear sturdy shoes with flat heels.

Hill Climbing

Hill-climbing is bettter exercise than walking on a level, for it forces you to hoist yourself with the hip muscles, those powerfully lazy muscles which spread across the back of the hips. These are seldom used in sedentary activity.

Going up an incline affords much the same efficient legwork as kicking or swinging the legs.

As you walk and climb get the feel of using these muscles. Try always to keep your hips under your trunk, and make the hip muscles work in pushing you ahead or lifting you up. As you do this, it is natural to pull up with the abdominal muscles in front and to lift the chest. All this makes for good posture, and whenever you walk in good posture you get more out of it as an exercise.

Games Good Exercise

As you stride along, breathe deeply and swing your arms freely. First thing you know you'll be enjoying yourself.

If you take up walking for exercise, choose some game for fun. Margaret Speaks loves sandlot baseball and plays it with such dignitaries as Alfred Wallenstein, the noted conductor. You may prefer pingpong, bowling or softball. Take your choice, but have some game you can enjoy with others—then play it. The more active recreation you have, the less you will have to think about getting exercise.

The most vigorous activity, however, burns too few calories to take care of excess weight. To get your poundage down, follow a balanced menu, like the following:

Ideal Way to Cover Hair During Repairs

The best job yet of camouflaging a coiffure during repairs is done with an invention of Joan Bennett's.

Like any other girl, the clever movie star has to put up a stray curl or two now and then. But she doesn't like the rest of the family to see the process.

So Joan designed a princess-style lounging robe with a hood hanging from the shoulders. Whenever her hair goes up in pins or curlers, the hood goes over it and frames her face in flattering folds of silk or wool in her favorite colors.

Poland's Prime Minister Honored at Dinner

Brilliant List of Guests on Hand For Gala Fete at Polish Embassy

By Carolyn Bell

Where but in Washington could a prime minister meet two foreign ministers (of two refugee governments), top-ranking United States and British military authorities, and the last Catholic priest to escape from Poland, all at the same dinner table? Gathering in a brilliant list of dinner guests—as only the world's Capital could provide—the Polish Ambassador and Mme. Ciechanowska were hosts last night in honor of the Prime Minister of Poland, Gen. Wladyslaw Sikorski.

The general, who flew to Canada by bomber several days ago, chalked up a busy day. He not only had his second conference at the White House but conducted an "off-the-record" talk with a group of Polish-American leaders who came here from all parts of the country. Following the dinner there was a reception for members of the embassy staff.

Jan Masaryk Attends Dinner

Jan Masaryk, foreign minister of the Czech government in exile, came to Washington especially to attend last night's dinner that was also attended by the Minister of Foreign Affaires of Poland, Count Raczynski. The Chief of Staff of the United States Army, George C. Marshall, was in the group dining at the embassy, as was British Maj. Gen. R. H. Dewing.

The Minister of Czecho-Slovakia and Mme. Hurban were there as were the Minister of Yugoslavia and Mme. Fotitch, the Minister of Netherlands and Mme. Loudon and the Minister of Canada, Leighton McCarthy. The Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Adolph Berle, jr., were there as were Representative Sol Bloom and his daughter, Miss Vera Bloom; Col. and Mrs. William Donovan and the member of the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System, M. S. Szymczak, who is of Polish decent.

Still others there were members of Sikorski's party including the Assistant Chief of the General Staff, Col. Leon Mitkiewicz, and Msgr. Kaczynski, who escaped from Poland after the invasion and delivered the first report on the state of Catholicism after the occupation to the Pope. The former Charge d'Affaires of Poland in Russia, J. H. Retinger, was there as was the Polish Military Attache, Col. Wlodzimierz Onacewicz. Completing the dinner list were Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Cox, Lady Gainsborough, Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, Mrs. Beaumont Nesbitt, Mrs. George Mercer-Nairne, Mrs. Leland Harrison and Countess Lasocka.

Castillo Najeras To Fete Padilla

Washington will hardly have a chance to catch its breath from the Sikorski visit when it will be plunged into a whirl of partying for the Mexican Minister of Foreign Affairs, Dr. Ezequiel Padilla. The Mexican Ambassador, Dr. Francisco Castillo Najera, and Senora de Castillo Najera will be hosts at a reception on Wednesday in honor of Dr. Padilla.

The gentleman, who was strongly anti-Axis in his stand at the recent Rio conference, will be widely feted during his stay here. Dr. Padilla is scheduled to arrive on Monday. The Acting Secretary of State, Sumner Welles, will give a dinner in honor of Dr. Padilla some time next week. Also planning a party in his honor is the head of the Military Affairs Committee of the Senate, Senator Tom Connally.

Clarence Hewes Gives Dinner For Visitors

In town for a visit with Clarence Hewes, popular Mr. and Mrs. Herman Rogers, of New York, are being widely entertained. Their calendar yesterday, which included a luncheon given by Merritt Swift at the Sulgrave Club, and an off-the-record cocktail party, ended with a dinner given by Mr. Hewes last night.

The Chinese Ambassador, Dr. Hu Shih, was ranking guest at the dinner, which was arranged for Mrs. William J. Calhoun, who made her home in Peking for many years. Returning to this country last August, she has been in Chicago with relatives since then. She came to Washington several days ago and is staying at the Mayflower Hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. Rogers will be luncheon guests of Donna Julia Brambilla at the 1925 F Street Club today. This evening they will accompany Mr. Hewes to the supper party which Mrs. Robert Low Bacon is to give after the film presented by the British War Relief Society.

Mrs. Leland Harrison, wife of the United States Minister to Switzerland, will entertain Mr. and Mrs. Rogers at luncheon tomorrow, and tomorrow evening they will be honor guests at a dinner to be given by Mrs. D. Buchanan Merryman. They have been close friends of Mrs. Merryman ever since the latter's niece became the Duchess of Windsor at a ceremony in the Rogers' home on the Riviera.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hewes, of Hartford, Conn., will arrive in Washington today for a brief visit with Clarence Hewes. From here they will go to Wilmington, N. C., where Mrs. Hewes will serve as sponsor when the S. S. Thomas Hewes is christened on Sunday.

New Envoy And Family TakeApartment

If finding a plain, ordinary house is difficult, finding one suitable for an embassy must be ten times harder, so the newly appointed Paraguayan Ambassador, Senor Dr. Celso Velazquez and Senora de Velazquez have settled themselves and their two children in an apartment at the Roosevelt Hotel until the problem is solved. They arrived in Washington last weekend, staying for a time at the Wardman Park.

The Paraguayan Legation having been raised to an embassy only a few weeks ago, Dr. Velazquez is the first Ambassador from his President to this country. They arrived here with their children, Maria Regina, who is 9, and Antonio Raul, just 5, and the Ambassador's sister, Senorita Ana Garcia Velazquez.

Also coming with the party was Senor Nestor Campos Rosin, who is serving as secretary for the embassy. They were met at the train by Dr. Leo S. Rowe, Director General of the Pan American Union; Philip W. Bonsal, chief of the Division of American Republics of the Department of State; Stanley Woodward, Assistant Chief of Protocol; Robert Woodward, and Edwin Schoenrich, also of the State Department, and William Wallace White, for many years Consul General in New York.

Mr. White has now returned to his duties there. The legation here was left in his hands early in the year, when the former Minister, Dr. Juan Jose Soler, left Washington.

Col. Pierce is here to attend meetings of the United States Public Health officers this week, and most of yesterday's guests were from the public health ranks, many of whom knew the Pierces when he was stationed in Washington some years ago. Col. and Mrs. Pierce's visit in Washington had a dual purpose, the other being to see their son, Claude Pierce, jr., who left earlier in the week for Fort Benning, Ga.

The Hunt Country

By Nina Carter Tabb

Sons, Husbands and Fathers in U. S. Service Center Spotlight in Virginia Circles

SONS—and fathers—from the "hunt country," who are serving in the ranks of Army and Navy, as is to be expected these days, are adding a whole new kind of "Comings and Goings" in Virginia.

Richard Hunter Dulany Randolph, of Upperville, son of Dr. Archibald Cary Randolph, has been accepted in the U. S. N. R. and will be commissioned in the near future as Lieutenant (j. g.), Bureau of Aeronautics. Mr. Randolph is awaiting orders and expects to be sent soon to Quonset Point, R. I., for a period of training.

A house guest over the weekend of Mrs. Harris Field, of Fieldmont, The Plains, was her brother, Capt. William W. Ackerly, who reported for Army service this week and is now stationed at Fort Meade, Md.

Capt. Ackerly won his military rank in World War I, having served overseas with the Twenty-seventh Division, which was composed of members of the New York National Guard. For the past 14 years he has been commonwealth's attorney of Rockbridge County, Virginia, and will continue to hold office during his military service, as an acting attorney has been appointed to serve during his absence.

He volunteered for service during Christmas time and was called into service immediately following the acceptance of his commission. It must be a gratifying experience to him, getting back into the Army at 52 years of age.

SERVICE WIVES' visits to husbands, as well as the eagerly awaited visits of the soldier and sailor men on leave, are "coming and going" news hereabout, too. Mrs. Henry Cochran Skinker, of The Plains, will leave this weekend for Fort Knox, Ky., where she will spend some time to be near Mr. Skinker, who is on duty there.

A gay house party was that given by Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Rumsey, jr., of New York, who spent the past weekend at their Virginia home near Middleburg. Mr and Mrs. Rumsey came down bringing about ten house guests and they were all here to attend the dinner party given by Mr. and Mrs. C. Oliver Iselin, jr., at their home, Wolver Hill, Middleburg, announcing the engagement of their daughter, Miss Nancy Iselin to Ensign Charles Morgan, U. S. N. R., of New York. Mr. and Mrs. Rumsey entertained at a luncheon party the next day in honor of the couple, their guests numbering about 30 people.

After undergoing a serious operation at Emergency Hospital in Washington John Rawlings, of The Plains, is recovering nicely and hopes to be able to come home in about two weeks. Mrs. Rawlings is staying in Washington with friends to be near her husband. Her two children, Miss Betty Kernan, home for spring vacation from Stuart Hall, Staunton, and "Jazz" Kernan, of Woodberry Forrest, Orange, Va., are staying with Miss Hunter Smith in The Plains during their mother's absence.

MRS. JOHN BUTLER will leave tomorrow for New York and a visit to her mother, Mrs. William Lenhart at Nyack, N. Y. Her son, Jack Butler, jr., of Princeton University, will spend the weekend with them at Nyack.

After an accident wherein his hand was badly hurt, Mr. Clay Bayly, of Middleburg, is reported recovering satisfactorily. Mr. Bayly went to the assistance of one of the Orange County Hunt hounds which had been caught tight in a wire fence. After the frightened animal was loosened, it grabbed Mr. Bayly, biting both of his hands badly.

Three Teas Given To Help Project to "Save the Children"

With the first of four weeks of parties launched in a round of fetes, no lag in the entertaining Washington hostesses are doing for the benefit of the Save the Children Federation is yet in sight.

Three teas were marked off yesterday's calendar only to have another come up for today, when Mrs. Thurman Arnold will entertain during the afternoon hours for both Washington and Fairfax County friends of the project. One of the largest fetes of the series to date will be given Saturday, when Mrs. Horace Williams will be hostess at tea in the Madison Room at the Wardman Park Hotel.

Mrs. Albert Atwood and Mrs. Thad Brown, sr., were both in the role of hostess yesterday afternoon at separate fetes. Among the guests at Mrs. Brown's were Mrs. Charles McNary, Mrs. Harold Burton, Mrs. Ralph Brewster, Mrs. Charles Droop and Mrs. Oscar Bland.

'Ma' Williams Starts Protection Project

If you've received "a message from your air raid zone to you," chances are it was inspired by Mrs. John R. "Ma" Williams, who has organized a group of civic-minded women into a "Protect Your Neighborhood League."

Yesterday the group inaugurated a fund-raising drive with a rally at Pierre's—funds to buy air aids and first-aid equipment. In the league are Mrs. Demarest Lloyd, Miss Margaret Fraser, Mrs. Powell Clayton. Mrs. William Mason Wright, Mrs. Mason Gulick, Mrs. Ormsby McCammon, Mrs. Frederick Sterling, Mrs. Frank Letts, Mrs. James Mitchell. Mrs. Chauncey P. Murray. Mrs. Sophy Stanton, Mrs. Harry Carr, and Mrs. James Starey.

Madeleine Carroll Center of Attention

When ladies meet, no one knows what turn the conversation may take, but in the many luncheon groups yesterday at La Salle du Bois the conversation and glances turned uniformly on Madeleine Carroll, of Hollywood fame. Lunching with an unidentified Navy commander, Miss Carroll gave her black ensemble an exotic turn when she topped her gold hair with sprays of saffron orchids.

At another table Mrs. Thomas Byrd, who was in town for the day to talk over the remodeling of her Winchester home, was lunching with her schoolgirl daughter, Lucy Mitchell.

More evidence that spring vacation time is here was to be found in the trio of sub-debs chatting and eating gaily together. The three were Miss Sherry Parker, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Chauncey G. Parker jr.; Miss Nancy McGuire, another colonel's daughter, her parents being Col. and Mrs. Hamilton McGuire, and Miss Cornelia Clayburgh.

Three great cities were represented at the luncheon for three given by Mrs. Douglas MacKeachie, who had with her Mrs. E. Hughes Giblin, of New York, and Mrs. Richard Kingston, jr., of Chicago.

Clubs

D. C. Women's Clubs Act to Prevent Tenants for Asking Increases in Rent

INFORMED that many D. C. landlords are putting pressure on tenants to request rent increases, the D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs acted promptly to squelch such practices. Yesterday the federation held an emergency meeting to pass three important resolutions. One related to rent control, another to war economy, and the other to oppose appointments of nonresidents to the D. C. courts.

The first resolution introduced and passed referred to the D. C. Rent Control Law. It reads as follows: "Be it resolved: That D. C. Federation of Women's Club recommends to the Rent Control Commission that all requests by tenants for increases in rent be required to be signed before properly authorized officials of the Rent Commission in the headquarters of the commission, and that no weight be given to any such request where the signature on such a petition is obtained at any other place than the aforementioned headquarters of the Rent Control Commission."

In another resolution the federation went on record as opposing the Tydings amendment to the court-merger bill, and said "we further recommend that no employes be appointed to the court except bona fide residents of D. C."

The third resolution of the Department of Legislation passed by the body was "That the General Federation of Women's Club use its utmost influence in persuading our Government not to appropriate public money for any governmental expenses except those vitally essential to defense or to the legitimate welfare of any of the States or the Federal Government."

Other resolutions passed by the federation yesterday were that "support be given legislation to establish a Woman's Army Auxiliary Corps by voluntary enrollment for service with the Army of the United States." An amendment was added that all clubs in the federation take up a discussion on the matter.

The federation also passed a resolution opposing the passage of the mandatory joint income tax law that requires husbands and wives to file joint income-tax returns.

Old Clothes to Be Worn at Dinner

AS A concession to wartime economy, members of Washington Hadassah expect to wear their old clothes to their benefit "war needs" dinner Sunday evening at 6:30 o'clock at the Mayflower Hotel.

Also participating in the affair are the professional and junior groups of Hadassah. This war dinner takes the place of the usual annual donor dinner—always a big event in the organization's history.

Mrs. Moses P. (Judith G.) Epstein of New York, president of national Hadassah from 1937 to 1939, and Dr. Reinhold Niebuhr, professor of Applied Christianity, Union Theological Seminary, will be the two guest speakers. Following the program there will be dancing to Meyer Davis' Orchestra.

Proceeds from the dinner will be used for Hadassah's enlarged program in Palestine. This includes supplies for hospitals serving the Allied armies. About 30 tons of surgical instruments, drugs, vitamin-rich foods, cod-liver oil, hospital supplies, clothing and blankets are sent to Palestine each month by Hadassah. These supplies are transported in priority space given free of charge by the British Ministry of Shipping and the British War Relief Society.

The Washington Council of Church Women is eager to enlist new recruits in a new project just announced. This project is for the benefit of patients in the crippled children's ward at Gallinger Hospital. Sponsored by the council hospital committee, headed by Mrs. Thomas W. Marshall, the proposed plan is for various church organizations to provide furnishings, linens, clothing and a few comforts not included in the hospital's budget.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Lend Lease Agency's Abolition Believed Near

The Lend-Lease Administration is slated to be abolished and its work divided among several agencies. Its raw materials activities would go to the Board of Economic Warfare, food buying would be concentrated in the Agriculture Department, and the remainder of its work would be transferred to the War Department under one of the plans up for study. The Board of Economic Warfare, however, would like to land the entire organization. Incidentally, if food buying is concentrated in the Agriculture Department it is likely that something similar to the food administration of World War I will be set up in the department. During World War I the food administration was an independent agency.

One thousand stenographers are wanted within a week by Federal agencies here. Each of the 13 Civil Service districts has been assigned quotas of stenographers. The girls will be put on trains and shipped here. If you are a stenographer all you have to do is to mention it at the Civil Service Commission. You'll get a job quick . . . REA's new Longfellow Building is ticketed for Jack Blandford's new National Housing Agency. It is planned to put all the housing activities under a single roof for the first time.

The War Production Board is scheduled to hear a decentralization report today. Sidney Weinberg, assistant to the chairman, and Herbert Emmerich, former executive secretary, have been working on a plan to decentralize WPB's work. Very few employes here now would be moved. It is proposed that WPB decentralize to cities where there is a heavy concentration of a single industry. For example, WPB has already set up its auto industry branch in Detroit. It is suggested, for example, that the rubber branch be moved to Akron, that the farm machine section be sent to Chicago, and that New York City be the center of operations for the textile branch.

It's Bursting Seams

An all-out decentralization of WPB is understood to have been under consideration. This idea was quickly dropped, however, as it is obvious that the agency must be kept here. WPB is really bursting at the seams. One official said that the agency needs twice as many people and three times as much space. But it is getting only a few of the new people now, since hiring has been stopped in several divisions. There is just no space to put new employes. Donald Nelson, WPB boss, said some time ago that field operations would be centralized and the decentralization report will call for a speeding up of this process.

A decision on the transfer of the Bureau of Old-Age and Survivors Insurance must be made within a week. For more than four months the employes have been upset by moving plans and now even the officials are becoming irritated over the delay. Federal Security officials like the office space proposed in Chicago but they insist the housing shortage there is as bad as it is in Baltimore. Some are suggesting St. Louis.

The office for Emergency Management is recruiting $3200 classification analysts with Government experience to take jobs in San Francisco, Los Angeles, Seattle, Dallas, Kansas City, Chicago, Cleveland, Atlanta, Philadelphia and New York. Apply at the War Transfer Unit, 801 E Street Northwest, if you are interested . . . Dr. Vergil Reed, assistant director of the Census Bureau, is heading a new branch in WPB's Statistics Division . . . Members of the board of review at the National Resources Planning Board: Martha Townsend, chairman, and G. J. Barnett, alternate; Willard F. Day and Wilbert G. Fritz, department member and alternate, and Emmett J. McCarthy and Leonard Unger, employe member and alternate.

The unofficial ban on men with an A-1 draft classification and women over 35 in war agencies is due for an investigation if the practice continues. Several members of Congress are understood to be interested in this discrimination and the Civil Service Commission itself is not too happy over the situation. The commission can crack down on the choosy agencies. It certainly knows their identities ... Army and Navy are reported to be peeved at Dr. Thomas Parran, the Public Health chief, over some of his recent writings and speeches ... WPB is recruiting assistant clerks with travel voucher Government experience through the War Transfer Unit. The jobs pay $1620.

Best Cadet Band— Woodrow Wilson High School's cadet band marched off the field at Central High School's stadium yesterday with first place in the band competition. The band is captained by William Stiles. Western and Anacostia placed second and third, respectively. The battalion drill competition was won for the fourth consecutive year by Western's first battalion. Second place honors in the drill went to Western's second battalion. Central's first battalion placed third

School Use Urged for Recreation

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

As one way to alleviate Washington's "bog down on the recreational front," the Federal Security Administration yesterday recommended seven-day community use of public schools and Federal buildings within the District and on the periphery.

The recommendations were made in a study that took the office of Charles A. Taft, assistant director of the Office of Defense Health and Welfare Services, several months. Other suggestions included erection or renovation of the following buildings:

1. A recreation club for civilian men and women at 1759 R Street Northwest, remodeling of the present structure to cost $90,000.

2. A clubhouse to be constructed for $75,000 on park property near Bolling Field to serve military populations of that post and the nearby Naval Reserve Air Base.

3. A clubhouse to be constructed for civilians "in the center of Government office concentration" at a cost of $150,000.

4. A clubhouse, either a remodeling or construction job, in neighborhood adjacent to Fifteenth and R Streets Northwest, to be used by civilians and to cost $90,000.

"Quickie" Buildings Proposed

All new construction would be of Government type "D" and "A" buildings—or of the "quickie" variety. Money would come from Lanham Act provisions.

The report suggested that private schools, clubs, and churches also could make more effective use of their space to serve war community needs. Particularly were private schools asked to consider offering their facilities during the summer months.

All the Federal buildings with libraries and museums and "available space for recreation" were urged as a means of helping to meet the impact of a wartime population. Utilization of cafeterias during after-eating hours should be looked into, the committee urged, pointing out that the floor space might be good for dancing.

Commissioner William Reynolds of the Public Buildings Administration was asked to list available spots in Federal buildings, to insist on proper recreational facilities in the new housing developments planned for Government girls, and to look out for restaurant facilities and recreation space in the buildings under construction.

Outdoor Recommendations

Specific recommendations as to improvement of outdoor recreational facilities in the District included:

1. Expenditure of $889,750 to make improvements in Federal-owned buildings and recreation fields operated by the Community Centers and Playgrounds Department.

2. Improvement of the C. & O. Canal area immediately adjacent to Chain Bridge so that it can be used for outing purposes, this to cost about $50,000.

3. Improvements in Rock Creek Park, $25,000.

4. Improvements in Glover Park, $25,000.

In areas on the periphery of the District these recommendations were made:

1. Renovation of the 30-room house on the Leiter estate, about 3 miles above Chain Bridge, on the Virginia side. National Capital Parks own the property, it was pointed out, and the area surrounding the house is ideally suited to small picnics and outing parties. Cost was estimated at $15,000.

2. Work should be begun immediately, the committee declared, on construction of a lake in the Chopowamsic recreation area, and the development there of an outdoor playing field and a 2000-foot beach. Construction of additional cabins and lodges for family use also are recommended for the area, which contains 17,000 acres and has been used heretofore as a camp for boys.

Because Chopowomsic is near Quantico and Fort Belvoir, it was declared, it is well located as a leave area for military personnel and should be so developed. Cost was estimated at $100,000.

3. The Catoctin Park area near Thurmont, Md., about 65 miles from the District, should have its buildings and camp facilities developed for year-round activities. This would require only $30,000, it was stated.

At House Hearing

Medical Tests For Drunken Drivers Urged

A House District subcommittee last night appeared ready to favor legislation which would permit persons arrested for drunken driving in the District to submit themselves to medical tests to determine whether they are intoxicated.

Representative McMillan (Democrat), of South Carolina, acting as chairman of the subcommittee on health, said after a hearing on the question yesterday that he favored some form of legislation setting up machinery to permit the tests.

Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, the District coroner, and Dr. Richard M. Rosenberg, deputy coroner, both appeared before the subcommittee and recommended legislation.

"The courts should be able to learn the exact percentage of alcohol in a person's blood and from that be able to determine whether he is under the influence of liquor," he said.

Two bills were under consideration by the subcommittee. One, sponsored by Chairman Randolph, of the District Committee, would appoint personnel to determine scientifically the degree of intoxication of persons arrested as drunken drivers.

The other, sponsored by Representative Reece (Republican), of Tennessee, establishes outright standards for chemical tests of allegedly drunken drivers.

It is expected that the subcommittee will recommend the Randolph bill.

Van Duzer Urges Care in Blackout Of Traffic Lights

The extra traffic hazards that midnight-to-morning blackout of traffic lights which begins tonight will cause brought from Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer last night a warning to all pedestrians and drivers to observe special caution at intersections.

Police Chief Edward Kelly ordered all precinct officers, both on beats and in scout cars, to patrol intersections more carefully than ever tonight and in the succeeding nights until new traffic light switches are installed.

Members of the traffic and police departments will meet tonight with air-raid wardens to instruct them in turning off the traffic signals with the keys to be distributed among them.

Baroness Korff Leaves Estate Worth $550,000

An estate valued at about $550,000 was left by Baroness Alletta Van Reypen Korff, White Russian nobleman's widow who committed suicide in her Foxhall Road home on March 13, it was revealed at District Court yesterday.

The entire estate was left to her two children, Dr. Serge A. Korff, of Washington, and Barbara Korff Russell, of New York City.

According to a petition for probate of her will filed at the courthouse by Attorney Julius Aronoff the estate included real estate valued at $21,154 and debts were estimated at about $1000.

Bids Opened On 23d Street Job

Low bidders for a contract to widen and improve Twenty-third Street from Washington Circle to Constitution Avenue Northwest were the Donaldson Paving Co., whose price was $189,795.50, and McGuire & Wolfe, who bid $191,147.60. Both are Washington firms.

Four other contractors bid for the job, which includes an underpass to carry Virginia Avenue beneath Twenty-third Street. The top estimate was $198,328. The Donaldson price is $908.25 below the District Engineer Department estimate of the cost.

DISTINCTIVE HONOR—Mrs. C. L. Hsia pins an eagle badge on her son, David, in the presence of his father (left) and T. L. Tsui, First Secretary of the Chinese Embassy. David is the first Chinese boy to receive such an award from the Boy Scouts of America

The honor of being the first Chinese boy to earn the rank of Eagle Scout in the Boy Scouts of America was bestowed last night on David Hsia. The son of Dr. and Mrs. C. L. Hsia, a premedical student at Haverford College, he received his distinctive badge at the Washington Boy Scout Court of Honor held at Macfarland Junior High School.

In presenting the badge to Hsia, L. T. Tsui, First Secretary of the Chinese Embassy, said that the new Eagle Scout symbolized the highest type of Chinese youth. He stated that scouting movements both here and in China illustrated the close alliance existing between the two nations and that it was the responsibility of all parents to foster the development of scouting.

Other Scouts awarded Eagle badges were Edward Mertz, Owen Nibley, Paul F. Schucker, jr., and Paul E. Fisch. Dr. Paul F. Bartsch, chairman of the Court of Honor, made the awards.

After the presentation of the Eagle badges, Scouts and Scoutmasters from Washington troops received the following honors:

Sad Mistake

Ogden, Utah, March 26 (UP).—Patrolman Morely, a professional wrestler in his spare time, made out this report on arresting a drunk: "Smashed two windows in the Vestas Cafe; blacked Mr. Vestas' eye; had another fight; also punched an old man on the street in the nose. Thought he could do the same to officer—sad mistake."

Citizens Lose Defense Home Zoning Fight

Permission to erect 12 defense housing apartment houses on the Villa Rosa estate was granted yesterday by the Zoning Commission, in spite of protests filed by representatives of the Cleveland Park, Wesley Heights and Cathedral Heights Citizens' Associations.

A nearby tract on Massachusetts Avenue also was rezoned to permit a shopping center to be included in the McLean Gardens development now in construction on the old McLean estate, Friendship.

A petition from Ralph P. Counselman to have an area bounded by Massachusetts Avenue, Eleventh, Twelfth and E Streets Southwest rezoned from Commercial D to Industrial D was refused. Counselman had wanted to enlarge his abattoir to provide meat for nearby Army cantonments.

Rezoning was denied for premises at 1694-98 Thirty-first Street and at 3100-04 R Street Northwest, where petitioners wanted to establish boarding houses.

Petitions to rezone the southeast corner of Albemarle Street and Connecticut Avenue and the northeast corner of Connecticut Avenue and Yuma Street from A Residential A-restricted to Commercial were not granted. The erection of an apartment house east of Connecticut Avenue between Van Ness and Yuma Streets was disapproved.

Rezonings of an acre on the east side of Nichols Avenue south of Galveston Street Southwest from Residential A to First Commercial, and of lots on the west side of Thirtieth Street south of Alabama Avenue from A-restricted to A Residential were allowed.

Crosstown Bus Hearing Set April 7

Three New Feeder Lines Are Planned; Some Duplications To Be Eliminated

Proposed extension of the crosstown bus line from its present Eastern terminus at Seventh Street and Michigan Avenue Northeast to South South Dakota Avenue and Bladensburg Road Northeast will be given a public hearing by the Public Utilities Commission April 7 at 10 a. m.

Some sections of the Rhode Island Avenue and Hyattsville-College Park bus lines which the extended crosstown line would duplicate are to be eliminated.

The extension of the crosstown line was held desirable by the Public Utilities Commission after checking the service, inaugurated January 23. The extension will run from the present Eastern terminus at Seventh Street and Michigan Avenue Northeast along Monroe Street, South Dakota Avenue and Franklin Street to Bladensburg Road.

Three new feeder lines would be instituted:

1. From the intersection of Twenty-second Street and Eastern Avenue Northeast, south on Eastern Avenue, west on Varnum Street, south on Twenty-second Street, west on Otis Street, south on Twentieth Street, east on Franklin Street, south on Twenty-fourth Street, west on Evarts Street, and northerly over the southbound route to Varnum Street to Eastern Avenue.

2. From the intersection of Twelfth Street and South Dakota Avenue Northeast, south on South Dakota Avenue, south on Sargent Street, west on Varnum Street, south on Tenth Street, east on Perry Street, north on Michigan Avenue, east on Quincy Street, south on Twelfth Street, east on Franklin Street, south on Fourteenth Street and Montana Avenue Northeast, then around a loop to be designated and return northbound over the described southbound route.

3. Along Rhode Island Avenue, the eastern portion of Rhode Island Avenue line will operate in two sections over the present Hyattsville-College Park routes; one section having the eastern terminus at Queens Chapel Road and Eastern Avenue Northeast; and the other section having the terminus at Eastern Avenue and Randolph Street, both routes to operate westward over the existing Hyattsville-College Park route as far as the intersection of Rhode Island Avenue and Ninth Street, then west on Rhode Island Avenue to Fifteenth Street, south on Fifteenth Street, west on Eye Street, north on Sixteenth Street and east on Rhode Island Avenue over the existing route.

Operation of the Rhode Island Avenue bus line would be eliminated on Twenty-third Street Northeast from Bunker Hill Road to Monroe Street, on Monroe Street from Twenty-second to Twelfth Street, from Monroe to Franklin, on Franklin to Fourth Street, and the western end of the line from Sixteenth and Eye Streets west to Eighteenth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest.

The Hyattsville-College Park line will be discontinued from the intersection of Rhode Island Avenue and Ninth Street to the present terminal at Seventh Street and Constitution Avenue Northwest.

'Bahama Passage,' Capitol, Cries to Be Salted Away

Costars Madeleine Carroll and Stirling Hayden Unable to Salvage Flagrantly Feeble Script; Cliff Nazarro Wows 'em in Nice Stage Revue

IN ITS TECHNICOLOR revelation of what the visual aspects of life are like between the bright sun and turquoise sea of one of the less luxuriant islands of the nearby tropics, "Bahama Passage" is sufficiently striking to occupy the attention of at least one eye. As a romantic drama in which any credence can be placed, it is just a feather this side of impossible.

The new screen feature at Loew's Capitol Theater has its locale on Dildo Cay, a tiny isle in the British West Indies, devoid of waving palms and tropical verdure, but rich in salt deposits worked by 250 natives under the direction of a white family that has run the island for generations. Upon the accidental death of the father, his neurotic wife engages an unknown manager to operate the property as a safeguard against what she incomprehensibly fears will be the murder of her son. To the remote and isolated atoll this slightly demented executive brings a radiant daughter who, as the picture's introductory title so quaintly puts it, "has been around."

From this promising situation, Virginia Van Upp has evolved a screen play that undertakes to make a modern Adam and Eve of the tall, blond and resistant Adrian Ainsworth and the not-so-tall, but equally blond, Carol Delbridge. Once Adrian's secret bride has avowed the repugnance the island holds for her and divorced him, he and Carol—their parents having been conveniently removed by heart attacks, drownings and the like—contemplate the intricate processes by which a new civilization may be sprouted from two lonely young people alone in their own Garden of Salt. Or something like that.

The play is heavily sprinkled with what evidently was intended to be "salty" dialogue, but, unfortunately, it was permitted to stand out in the sun too long and became hopelessly denatured. The girl eventually gets the boy, but he never did have any luck, anyway.

Although we have never read Nelson Hayes' original story of "Dildo Cay," a random guess would be that chief responsibility for the vacuity of "Bahama Passage," except for its occasional flashes of Technicolor beauty, rested heavily upon Miss Van Upp's typewriter. Madeleine Carroll and the stalwart Stirling Hayden, aside from their glorious coats of tan and the rumors of romance that once attached to their names—thanks largely, one suspects, to the Paramount publicity department at the time the picture was being made—are able to bring little beyond the personable qualities with which they were generously endowed by nature to roles that no one could ignite with the spark of integrity and believability. Too bad to sacrifice two such pleasant people. Flora Robson and Leo G. Carroll are even more malignantly dealt with, which is also too bad. In the merest "bit," Cecil Kellaway is, happily, a natural man.

On the Stage, Things Are Different

The stage revue at the Capitol this week has three lustrous acts to commend it. Merriest and most versatile of these is the one contributed by Headliner Cliff Nazarro, famous comic of stage, screen and radio. Anyone who thinks Mr. Nazarro's capabilities are limited to an amazing proficiency in "double talk" is speaking it himself. He likewise is a glib and amusing straight-talking raconteur, a pianist of parts and no mean man with a song. He was a show-stopper at yesterday's first performance—and will be throughout the week. Preceding him on the bill are Lester Cole and His Debutantes, six attractive vocalists, who do nicely with a "Show Boat" medley that offers a novel introduction of the girls and presents their piece de resistance in a recitative of a Phillip Wyle patriotic poem, delivered by Mr. Cole with effective vocal background, and the Huberts, Frank and Jean, in their hilarious exposition of the astonishing things inebriety can do to you. The Rhythm Rockets are in and out in tricky routines that are rather more elaborately staged than usual.

Sam Jack Kaufman's "Raymond" overture, followed by Lynn Allison in a pyrotechnic interpretation of "Gianina Mia;" Art Brown's nostalgic interlude at the organ-ized community sing and the Fox Movietone News, sketching the illustrious career of Gen. MacArthur, are the minor complements of a feature that might quite as well be poured back into the cellar. Salt. Remember?

An Adam and Eve on Dildo Cay

STIRLING HAYDEN AND MADELEINE CARROLL
the antagonistic lovers in "Bahama Passage," Paramount's romance of the British West Indies, now on the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater. The exotic charm of the actual locale of the story is vastly enhanced by the vivid hues in which the picture has been photographed in Technicolor.

Abbott and Costello Ride High In Keith's 'Ride 'Em Cowboy!'

By Richard L. Coe

Messrs. Abbott and Costello are back on Keith's screen at their prankish best in a yarn that doesn't once whisper "war," but confines itself to a super-dooper dude ranch. "Ride 'Em Cowboy." This reporter had a wondrous merry time at its comical doings.

There are, of course, among the burghers of this brainy city—ahem—some luckles folk whose faces smile not, whose throats chuckle not, whose bodies squirm not at the troubles that beset puffy Costello and the smart ideas that issue from that self-deceiving wise guy, Bud Abbott. Pitty them, friends, but number not this observer among them. ("Macbeth" and "Athaliah" in one week is too much for our prose.)

Instead of coming up against life in the Army, Navy or the Air Corps, this time the duo finds itself playing a pair of peanut and hot dog vendors whom frisky Fate ships from Madison Square Garden to the rodeo country of the West. Shipped in a cattle car, at that.

So there you have it. The Lazy Setting gives Abbott the opportunity, sitting on a corral fence watching a particularly ferocious steer, to urge his partner on to ambitious heights. "Go on out there," says the thinnish one to the roly-poly one, "go out there and let him know who's boss." His not-so-dumb friend grasps the fence harder, looks out at the angry beast and chatters: "HE knows who's boss."

To the inevitable situations which beset these lads from West New York in the great open spaces, add Indian trouble. When they got off their cattle train, Lou had the ill fortune to land an arrow smack into the symbolic heart painted on a teepee. That meant he would marry its plump inhabitant. An Indian band plagues him from then until the fadeout, a band imagined by Dickens as well as by the Abott-Costello script writers. There's lively fun poked at the stream-of-consciousness film technique by tossing in a dream sequence for M. Ctostello and he comes out of it nobly.

As in previous A. and C. hits, "Ride 'em Cowboy" conforms to accepted pattern. With Dick Foran and Anne Gwynne to play the romantic leads there is the story of a noted horse country writer who can't ride at all and comes close to proving it. It's slight stuff but enough to gibe the piece progression . . . a sort of barometer to indicate that when romance is culminated the comics will fold up their variety tricks until next time.

Since the twosome can't be on the screen all the time (why can't they?) there are musical numbers to fill—pleasant bits even though one is anxious for the stars to come back into focus. Foran has a couple of pleasing ballads, as do radio's Merry Macs. Then there's Ella Fitzgerald to chant her fad-starting "A-Tisket, A-Tasket."

Keith's short subjects include a diverting Disney cartoon, "Orphans' Benefit," with a superbly dignified hen clucking a la operatic sopranos, and a "Stranger Than Fiction" collection, titled "Pussycat Cafe."

Broadway Glossary

New York, March 26.

DEFEAT: Last week a Texan took a machine to the Washington office of the National Inventors Council. It was a divining-instrument, which looked like a fishing rod and reel. "If you hold it in your hand," he explained, "and a steel object passes beneath it, it will cause your hand to shake. It can be used on ships, to locate submarines" . . . He experimented on five members of the council. They held the rod—under which a steel object was placed. But their hands didn't shiver. He then tried it on Lawrence Langner, of the Theater Guild—and noticed Langner's hand quaking . . . "Yes, my hand's shaking. "Langner explained, "but only because the new Katharine Hepburn show is playing in Washington—and there's a $27,000 gross."

MARY PICKFORD

SWAP: Mary Pickford and John Garfield met in a plane which was taking them to Tucson, Ariz. They were introduced and discovered that each was scheduled to make a political speech—in opposition to each other . . . "The audience you're going to address already feels the way you do, and my audience feels the way I do," said Garfield. "So here's what I propose. Let me address your audience, and you address mine. I'll try to convert your's, and you try to convert mine." . . . Miss Pickford's sponsors refused to permit it.

SECRET: Despite all the precautions taken by the President, at least five other men in Washington knew—a few days before the announcement was made—that Gen. MacArthur had left the Philippines . . . Those men are the Army officers who are assigned to decoding the dispatches from Bataan. They kenw that MacArthur no longer was there, because the communiques no longer featured the rich, colorful style which he alone employed.

FASHION: The British Government, through its Ministry of Health, is trying to interest our film-industry in a plan whereby the American screen actresses would cut their hair and feature a "Victory Bob." The girls of Britain, who ape the Hollywood stars, wear their hair long—and their hair often is caught in the machines on which they work . . . Their statistics also show that the girls can't accomplish much work on Saturday—because on Friday nights they have their hair done in preparation for the week-end dates. And they get little sleep on Friday nights, fearful that they might disturb their Betty Grable hair-do.

PROGRAM: This is part of our war-pattern, the strangest method of warfare ever used—and effective. The Donovan Committee will acquire a million reproductions of propaganda paintings made by Thomas Benton and other famous American artists. The reproductions will be distributed throughout China . . . And as part of our goodwill program, Walt Disney is making a series of color-shorts on such varied topics as "How to Plant Soy Beans" and "How to Stamp Out Malaria." They will be distributed throughout South America, as part of the Rockefeller Committee's Good-Will program to our neighbors.

Palace

Achieving what the undemocratic nations cannot risk for fear of gnawing at their own shaky foundations, Hollywood has managed a witty, amusing comedy against the background of the Nazi conquest of Poland. Fantastic as this may seem—and it is fantastic—the Carole Lombard-Jack Benny costarring film, "To Be or Not to Be," both instructs and amuses. Yesterday it began a second week at the Palace.

There is something uniquely American in its wise-cracking approach. No one is saying that its story is in the least bit possible or real. The point, however, is that "To Be or Not to Be" shows the dishonest gangsterism of the Nazi system by poking fun at it in thrusts that we Americans both admire and understand. It's the story of a Polish couple who get mixed up with the anti-Nazi underground of their country; it is shrewdly written, smartly directed by Ernst Lubitsch.

Miss Lombard has never been a more lovable, adroit comedienne than she is in this part and Jack Benny rates raves as a character whose laughs do not depend solely on gags. Robert Stack and Felix Bressart head the supporting players.

And don't fail to wait for the fadeout when Jack begins Hamlet's soliloquy, "To Be or Not To Be." It's a honey.

Army Gets Rid Of Old Tanks At Fort Meade

Special Dispatch to The Post

Fort George G. Meade, Md., March 26.—Before 30 days have passed Fort Meade will have seen the last of its 177 lumbering World War tanks, anachronisms in this day of lightning warfare.

For more than 10 years these tanks, 99 two-man whippets and 78 huge 40-ton Mark VIII's, have lain idle at Meade, gathering rust and inspiring nostalgia in visiting veterans. Despite their large content of valuable steel, they had not been sold before, it was understood, because they had been set aside for presentation to municipalities and to eligible organizations for display.

The big tanks, which could tear down the road at 3 miles an hour wide open, have been immobile since they were neatly lined up at Meade and their Liberty engines removed. The little fellows were used for a time by the Sixty-sixth Infantry before they gave way to modern jobs which, themselves, have become obsolete by now. But for all their age, they have occasionally been coaxed into life and as recently as a month ago a couple of them were used as tractors on the post.

At the suggestion of Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, a way was found to make the tanks available for sale and bids were asked several weeks ago. Lieut. Col. D. H. Finley, post quartermaster, said today the United Iron & Metal Co., of Baltimore, was high bidder, but did not disclose the amount of the bid.

Under the contract by which it acquired the tanks, the company must remove them from the post within 30 days. Due to the excessive immobility of the big tanks, it was expected they would be cut up with torches and shipped in fragments.

Knox Criticized By Norfolk Aide

Norfolk, Va., March 26 (AP).—Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox was indiscreet in making a statement to the press that Norfolk's waterfront has inadequate police and fire protection, City Councilman Leonard P. Roberts told the Norfolk Junior Chamber of Commerce last night during discussion of various kinds of "lip sabotage."

Lip sabotage may be just as injurious as any other kind, Roberts said today in expanding on his remarks, and added that he felt that importance of that of the Secretary of the Navy should be more careful of what he says for publication.

SOCIETY GIRLS WRITE SONGS. Deloise Emmons, lovely daughter of Lieut. Gen. Delos Emmons, has just written a pretty number called "Let's Play Love." Band Leader Pete Macias of the Lounge Riviera likes it mucho. Not to be outdone by Deloise, society lasses Nancy Mayo and Patricia Baker have also almost finished tunes which will be aired by the Riviera band.

Judge George D. Neilson gave a dinner in compliment to Maestro Joseph Sudy, of the Cosmos Room, and Mrs. Sudy at the Carlton the other eve. The party included Singer June Howard, Mr. and Mrs. Sis Sudy, Jeannine Baleg, Tom Campbell and Chet Turcheck.

BOB CHESTER and his band arrive in the Victory Room tonight, —grand news for swing connoisseurs. The Chester orchestra is due to remain until April 4, when Lew Breese comes in for a two week stay, broken by one stupendous evening on April 9, when the one and only Benny Goodman and his band will probably create an awful traffic snarl around the Hotel Roosevelt corner.

CAKE BAKING IN TROIKA. When Russell Swann broke eggs into a hat at the Troika, we expected that he'd probably produce them unbroken. But, no! The champion magico, amid much repartee, wafted out a freshly baked angel cake.

Alfred B. Merrick, ace hotel manager of the Roger Smith chain, has just taken over the steering wheel at Washington's Roger Smith Hotel. Mr. Merrick comes from White Plains, N. Y.

THE MAESTRO GOES MAD. When Al Carleton distributes bells all round the Casino Royal ringside so that the customers can play tunes, it's the beginning of unadulterated musical insanity.

TICKLING TUNES. "Katy Did, Katy Didn't," newest opus of the irrepressible "Ha Cha" Gardner in the Mayflower Lounge . . . The intoxicating version of "Moonlight Cocktails" played by Ralph Hawkins at Crossroads . . . "My Gal Sunday," newest nifty of the Rainbow Room band. Milt Davis is sure it's a swipe from some classic but he hasn't nailed the source yet . . . Neptune Room patrons are currently glued to their seats by Grant Thompson's specialty, "Ragtime Cowboy Joe." . . . And for dizzy piano-ing, bend an ear to Erskine Butterfield playing his own composition, "Chocolate" out at the Brown Derby.

Annette Stuart, young and lovely violinist, is playing with accordionist Les Colvin at Restaurant "400." She has played with the dance bands of Freddie Martin and Ernie Heckscher.

DEL RIO has a monumental new program of diversion. Henry King's dance band has been supplemented by the Mary Wood Trio which plays for luncheon and dinner. The King orchestra plays for the cocktail hour, supper dancing and Sunday tea dancing with amusing interludes by Dr. Rolf Passer, mental marvel.

"GOLDIE,"
the dynamic, Manhattan-style maitre d'hotel of the Roosevelt and its Victory Room. Formerly of New York's Hotel Edison

TEXAS AND THE ARMY COLLABORATE. Sergt. Maurice Sykes, former theatrical man, and Layton Bailey, Texan maestro of the Metronome Room, concocted the breezy and swiftly-paced show presented on Thursday at Camp Meade by the Bailey orchestra. The soldiers shouted: "More!"

Prize Monday debuts include the new "Hunting Revue" at the Balalaika, the appearance of the Michael Barker Trio at the Mayfair and a dazzler of a new show at the Lotus.

MELODIC ROMANCE. Cyrel Rodney's delicately soaring soprano holds Shoreham patrons in an enchanted spell in her version of that priceless oldie, "Smoke Gets In My Eyes." . . . Ditto for the customers in the Uptown cocktail lounge when Carmela goes off the deep end in "How Do I Know It's Real?" . . . Louisiana patrons sit enthralled when songstress Marylynn Pinnix gives out on "How About You?" . . . Julie Colt of the Pall Mall Room almost draws tears when she goes Deep South with "Nobody Knows the Trouble I've Seen." . . .

Floor shows at Kavakos' Grill are buxom and hilarious affairs, always include four or five of Baltimore's brightest vaudeville acts.

This Morning

Big Hank Took a Pay Cut—And Smiled

Orlando, Fla., March 26.—Buck Sergt. Henry Greenberg of the United States Army Air Corps draws $70 a month in contrast to the $350 per game the Detroit Tigers used to pay him on the basis of a $55,000 contract. But he does not seem at all unhappy about it.

POVICH

Hank gets around considerably in his Army uniform because the air corps is bright enough to show him off. They issue him those little three days furloughs for his appearance in public places and the big fellow is a walking advertisement for air corps morale. Hank can give you a pretty little spiel about Army life, and by the way he's pretty open-faced and convincing about it.

"I wasn't crazy about Army life after I was inducted," Hank was saying today, "but Pearl Harbor made a big difference. We know now that this war is for keeps and nobody can shirk anything that will help us to win it and defend what we have. I heard that stuff about "Over the Hill in October" during the six months before we were in the war, but the draftee who mentioned any such idea now would be murdered in his own camp by his buddies.

"I'll probably never be in a combat plane because they don't like fellows of my age—32—to break into that sort of stuff. But anybody who has been close as I have to those kids who fly those planes has got to admire 'em. I've flown with 'em and one deep dive was enough to convince me I wasn't cut out to pilot one of those things. The whole world was upside down and turning over. The kids who give those machines the down gun and make their contraptions behave as they like are just wonderful, that's all. They are the kind who are going to win this war for us."

The Army Air Corps likes Greenberg. His commandant at MacDill Field called him in the other day and said they'd like to make him a commissioned officer. Never mind about his lack of college education. He was a bright fellow and had aptitude. So Hank next month will start attending the officers' training school at Miami. He'll get a commission before the summer is over.

If the war isn't over within a couple of years Greenberg doesn't expect to get back into baseball. "By that time it will be too late, I guess," he was saying. "I'll be 33 and it will be time for me to start thinking of some other career. Anyway, that would be three years out of baseball for me, and I don't know if I could make it. But I feel like I could play ball tomorrow if the war ended suddenly."

Spring Training Period Called 'The Bunk'

The six weeks of spring training was labeled as the bunk by Greenberg. "The year I made that salary battle with the Tigers and didn't report until four days before the club broke camp, I had the best year of my career. Al Simmons had the same kind of experience. He didn't join the Athletics until the day the season started back in the early '30s. He played in the opening game, hit a home run in his first time at bat and played 154 games that year."

Greenberg is sort of proud of the fact that only Babe Ruth was able to command a bigger salary than himself as a big leaguer. I never got the $55,000 that they agreed to pay me last year because I went into the Army in May," Hank relates. "But it was nice to know that I might have earned that kind of money.

"I'm interested, of course, in Buck Newsom's salary argument with the Tigers, they say Buck was overpaid last year when he drew $32,000 from the Detroit club, but I'd say no ballplayer is overpaid. Those clubowners drive a hard bargain with you, and a ballplayer is entitled to all he can get. If Newsom got $32,000, more power to him."

Greenberg knows the value of color. He had a bit of it himself. "I used to strike out, but when I did I always resolved to strike out with what the sport writers call gusto. There wasn't going to be anything weak or timid about it. The fans forgive you more easily if you take a good cut. I've seen punks who were $5000-a-year ball players who wouldn't sign a kid's autograph book, the dopes. If I ever turned down anybody who wanted my autograph I don't remember it. It's no sin to want people to think well of you."

On the Line

SPORTIN' AROUND

George Marshall, one of the pro football fellows, says that there probably will be no such thing as a professional draft at the end of the next football season.

"Pro football will have to get along, for the duration, with older men or married men with dependents," he said during the recent pro convention here. "It would be an empty gesture to 'draft' a lot of college graduates, knowing that a great majority of them will go into the armed services."

CONSIDINE

The National Football League plans to do a little for the war effort. The annual all-star game in Chicago between the winning pro team and a crew of college stars, will probably go to Army and Navy relief, as will the post-season game between the winning pro team and an all-star pro team. This latter game, played in a snowstorm at the Polo Grounds in January of this year, raised $25,000. It probably will be played in the East again, with the Pacific Coast sports events confined to 5000 spectators.

What? No Desire for Publicity!

After years of having news thrust at us, we're lately running into athletic figures who want no publicity. Red Blaik, for instance. The West Point coach opened his spring training season last week, but asked that it be ignored. "There's enough on the public mind," Red said. The pro owners and coaches also attempted to play down their convention.

Herbert Bayard Swope sounds a bugle over racing:

The turf is not making any pretense about a shallow patriotism," Swope says. "It will do all it can to help in the national emergency. Those who make up the rank and file of the sport are either older men or undersized boys, so we need no exemption privileges to keep personnel at work. The turf will take care of its own. When the blackout took place in California many men and women were affected by the shutdown. The tracks there, under the commission, provided relief for those in need. Other racing communities will do the same should the sport be interrupted."

Solemn Warning From Race Head

Concerning the decision of the Turf Committee of America to give money to the war effort, Swope warned, after a preliminary estimate had placed the proposed gifts in the millions:

"It should be kept in mind that racing is not the bonanza it is sometimes painted as being. For each track that shows a profit, there is another that shows a loss. And many of the major tracks show only a narrow margin of profit. And these will be severely affected by any economic dislocation, such as tire and gas restrictions."

The turf committee, at its recent meeting, placed the United States turf investment at 200 million dollars, its annual taxes at 50 million dollars and its pay roll 225,000 persons.

Selling tickets for the Louis-Simon Army Relief Fight with one hand, Mike Jacobs took time out today to send wires with the other to a host of Navy fighters offering them places on the Navy Relief Society card at Washington on May 20.

Jacobs hopes to get Welterweight Champion Freddie Cochrane into the same Griffith Stadium ring with mercurial Ray Robinson, and to surround this attraction with bouts involving Bos'n mates Georgie Abrams, Tommy Tucker, Billy Soose, Fred Apostoli, Cal Cagny, Al Netlow and Steve Belloise.

The Louis-Simon gate won't be too great, but we wonder if as many parts of the country ever contributed more to a fight. A blizzard of nickels, dimes, quarters and dollars has inundated the office of Col. H. C. M. Supplee, one of the leading figures behind the fight, asking him to use it to buy tickets for soldiers who otherwise could not afford to see the Louis battle.

Here's a $64 question which may be worrying the Bureau of Internal Revenue, income tax division:

When is Louis going to fight for himself again?

Army Relief Big Winner In Garden

Abe Simon Likely Knockout Victim In Early Rounds; 16,000 Expected

By Tony Neri

Post Staff Writer

New York, March 26.—A year ago Abe Simon astounded the fistic world by staying 13 rounds with Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis. Tomorrow night, when big Abe steps into the ring at Madison Square Garden to again face Louis—now Pvt. J. Louis Barrow—in a title fight, the betting fraternity is laying even money that he won't last five of the scheduled 15 rounds.

Simon has traveled a rough road since the last meeting. But Jimmy Johnston, his manager, is one that isn't easily swayed by the opinion of the betting or fight crowd. He thinks that Simon, a son of a Richmond Hill storekeeper and as mild-mannered (out of the ring) as any fighter today, will succeed where a year ago he had to call it quits.

Louis, who once again is donating his share of the purse to charity—Army Emergency Relief—is facing Simon without the services of Jack (Chappie) Blackburn, his trainer, who has worked with Joe in every other championship fight. Blackburn, a one-time fighter himself, lies ill with pneumonia. He is credited with being the one man who made Louis champion. His wisdom and council has been evident in all of Louis' fights.

Chappie Confident

But Blackburn reports from Chicago where he is hospitalized, that Louis doesn't need him in his corner and he looks for Joe to stop Simon in three rounds. Said Chappie, "Joe knows what to do if I ain't there. He'll get Simon inside three rounds."

Another question for which Champion Joe has an answer is—What effect did training in an Army camp have on him? The surroundings were different. In his other camps Louis had things very much his own way. But he is now in the Army and trained in an Army camp. Joe just shrugs his shoulders and says Army life has done him a world of good. His only worry is that this show might not draw as much for the Army as did the Navy card in January.

The crowd is expected to fall below the 20,000 who saw Louis chill Buddy Baer in one round for the Navy Relief. Promoter Mike Jacobs, who is also donating his share of the profits to the good cause, is hopeful of 16,000.

First Bout as Private

Jacobs believes the show can turn over $70,000 to the Army Emergency Relief. The Navy people received $89,000 from the Louis-Baer scrap. Of that amount $47,000 represented Louis' share.

The fight will mark the first title defense for Louis since entering the Army. It will also be his twenty-first defense since knocking out Jim Braddock in Chicago, June 22, 1937, for the championship.

Of those last 20 victims, 18 have

North-South Open Crown To Hogan

By the Associated Press

Pinehurst, N. C., March 26.—Playing the course where he won his first tournament two years ago, belting Ben Hogan today won the North and South Open golf championship with a record 271—17 strokes better than even par.

Shooting the finest 72-hole stretch of his dazzling career since he set the tournament record here at 277 in 1940, Hogan carded successive rounds of 67-68-67-69 over the 6879-yard, par 72 course.

Defending Champion Sammy Snead came in second, with 276, bettering by one shot his own score in the North-South last year. Snead, tied with Byron Nelson for second place as the field went into the last 18 holes, scored a closing 68.

Nelson, the former open and P. G. A. king, finished with a 73 to tie Lloyd Mangrum, of Chicago, at 281 for third money.

First money of $1000 put his earnings for this season at $7158—more than $1000 ahead of Snead in second place.

One after another ofthe field challenged little Benny in the three-day meet. First it was the amazing Rookie Kennedy with his opening Then it was Harper with another 66. Then it was Harper with another bid for 36 holes and Snead had a good chance after 49 holes. But one by one Hogan turned them back, even when he was having trouble

Hershey Upsets League Champs

Hershey, Pa., March 26 (AP).—The Cleveland Barons, last year's champion of the American Hockey League, were eliminated tonight from this season's playoffs when Hershey scored a 3-to-1 overtime victory in the semifinals.

The triumph, gained by the two goals Gay Stewart, 18-year-old Canadian rookie, rifled home in the extra period, gave Hershey the right to play the winner of the Springfield-Indianapolis series for the league title.

Detroit Wins Over Montreal In Ice Play-off

By International News Service

Detroit, March 27.—The Detroit Red Wings tonight walloped the Montreal Canadiens, 6 to 2, in the National League Hockey Stanley Cup playoffs and thus earned the right to meet Boston in the semi-finals of the ice classic.

In winning the rubber match of the three-game series before 10,500 fans in Olympia, the Wings unleashed a terrific offensive in the second and third periods which literally blinded the losers. The Wings scored twice in the second stanza and four times in the final frame while Montreal registered at 1:26 of the second period when Jim Haggarty connected.

Detroit and Boston will meet in the first game of the semifinals in Boston Sunday.

Boston Wins, 3 to 2

Boston, March 26 (INS).—In a wild, wide-open contest, the Boston Bruins tonight defeated the Chicago Blackhawks, 3 to 2, to capture the series "B" National Hockey League playoff, two games to one.

Rookie Gordon Bruce pumped home two tallies for the champions.

Midwest Sextets In A.A.U. Finals

St. Joseph, Mo., March 26 (AP).—Hazel Walker Crutcher pitched in a wild field goal from midcourt in the last two seconds to give the Arkansas Motor Coaches a 22-21 victory over Des Moines A. I. B. tonight before 2000 screaming customers.

The Little Rock team plays Davenport A. I. C. for the women's national A. A. U. basketball championship Friday night. Davenport moved into the finals with a 26 to 22 win over Nashville Business College.

Red Cochrane Gets District May Bout Bid

By the Associated Press

New York, March 26.—Promoter Mike Jacobs started the ball rolling for a big Navy Relief Society benefit boxing show at Washington, D. C., today when he telegraphed an invitation to Welterweight Champion Freddie (Red) Cochrane to defend his title against Ray Robinson there March 20. Cochrane, who enlisted in the Navy soon after he won the title from Fritzie Zivic, is at the Newport, R. I., Naval Training Station.

Similar invitations were sent to Georgia Abrams, Tommy Tucker, Cal Cagni, Steve Belloise and Al Nettlow at the Jacksonville, Fla., Naval Training Station, and to Fred Apostoli and Billy Soose at the Norfolk, Va., Station.

Hope Knowles Bows in U. S. Net Upset

By the Associated Press

Brookline, Mass., March 26.—Mrs. Patricia Canning Todd, of Jackson Heights, N. Y., 20-year-old former Californian, gained the women's national indoor singles tennis crown today by upsetting first-seeded Hope Knowles, of Avon, Conn., 8—6, 1—6, 6—2, at the Longwood Cricket Club.

Second-seeded in the draw, and ranked twelfth nationally — as against her opponent's rank of seven, Mrs. Todd outlasted Miss Knowles in a nearly two-hour-long match featured by lengthy baseline rallies.

The doubles title was taken by the second-seeded combination of Katherine Winthrop, of Hamilton, and Mrs. Virginia Rice Johnson, of Brookline, who eliminated the veteran tandem of Mrs. Philip Theopold and Virginia Ellis, of Brookline, 6—2, 6—0.

Wisconsin Boxers Near NCAA Title

By the Associated Press

Baton Rouge, La., March 26—The favored University of Wisconsin Badgers, with every one of their seven fighters in the finals or semi-finals, emerged from preliminary bouts in the national intercollegiate boxing championships tonight with the team title almost in sight.

Gene Rankin, Wisconsin's classy lightweight, went into the finals by taking a decision from Leon Andrews of Louisiana State, and will meet Johnny Joca, University of Florida battler, Saturday night. semifinals in other divisions will be disposed of tomorrow night.

Many fighters advanced into semi-finals or even the finals, in two cases, through byes as the slim list of entries was paired off.

The University of Virginia lost its only scrap in the preliminary bouts but was left with two strong entries.

Milton Parlow, big Virginia heavyweight and a highly considered contender, was floored in the second round of his bout with Salvatore Mirabito, of Syracuse, the Eastern collegiate championship.

Neither of Virginia's other two entries, Norman and Kenneth Rathbun, brothers, fought in the preliminaries. Norman is scheduled to meet George Markis, of Wisconsin, in the 175-pound class tomorrow night while Kenneth drew a bye into the finals and will meet Charles Calkins, of Michigan State Saturday night in the 165-pound class.

120 POUNDS—Don Harper (Southwestern Louisiana Institute) won, technical knockout, from Bob Webber (San Jose State), 1:38 of third round.

Reds Buy Gerald Walker For a Reported $20,000

By the Associated Press

Tampa, Fla., March 26.—The Cincinnati Reds poured more money into their left field problem tonight by purchasing holdout Gerald Walker from the Cleveland Indians, of the American League.

General Manager Warren C. Giles of the Reds did not disclose the purchase price, but it was believed to be around $20,000.

Walker, 33, refused to take a $5000 pay cut from the Indians and has said he would retire to his Orlando, Fla., drugstore unless he got the same salary as last year.

Giles reached Walker a few hours later by telephone and they soon came to terms, Walker agreeing to sign for a reported $11,000.

Walker yesterday had been reported dickering with Washington, a team with which he formerly played.

Walker is expected to be used in left field, where Manager Bill McKechnie and Giles have spent upward of $300,000 in four years in an effort to find a man who can both hit and field.

For nine years Walker was a ranking slugger of the American League, but last year he hit only .263 and drove in 48 runs in 121 games. Consequently, the Indians tried to cut his stipend and also to sell him elsewhere in their league.

Wynn, Zuber Combine in 7-Hitter

N. L. Favorites Score On Repass' Twin Errors; 13 Hits Recorded by Griffs

By Shirley Povich

Post Staff Writer

Orlando, Fla., March 26.—The report from the Nats' camp is very routine. They simply won another ball game and thus the monotony is unbroken. Bucky Harris' boys, the scourge of the Grapefruit League, slapped down the St. Louis Cardinals this time. The score was rather modest, 2-1.

Again it was a tale of superb Washington pitching. Today's heroes were Rookie Early Wynn and Big Bill Zuber, who were completely unawed by the fact that the Cardinals are favorites to win the National League pennant. They set the Cards down roughly with seven hits, and the Nats' collected their thirteenth win in 17 Grapefruit League games.

Wynn and Zuber pitched shut-out ball. But they didn't get a shut-out because of two errors by Shortstop Bob Repass on consecutive plays in the fifth inning. Repass made a wild throw on one ball, fumbled a grounder on the next play and the Cards scored a run on Terry's Moore's double to left. That happened against Wynn.

Young Wynn traveled the first six innings and gave up six of the Cards' seven hits. Big Zuber was the particular pride of Manager Harris today. He allowed one hit in the last three innings, pitched himself out of a couple of rough spots, and permitted the Cards to bank two balls beyond the infield. With the tying and winning runs on base and only one out, Zuber struck out Dusak and lured Crabtree into popping the ball up.

Base Running Odd

The Nats had a tough sort of time getting two runs themselves. Actually they made 13 hits off left-handers Ernie White and Max Lamier. But the way they were running the bases they were making the least of 'em. Not only that, but they hit into three double plays.

George Case drove in a Washington run in the third after Repass singled to center and Porahl drew a walk. Wynn attempted a sacrifice and forced Repass at third. Case finally got the run home with a single to left.

It took three singles in the fourth to get the Nats their winning run. Vernon opened the inning with a hit to center and Evans moved him to second with a single to left. Galle struck out and Repass flied out, but Pofahl came along with a run-laden single to left.

The Nats turned up with a new character today named Alex Kvasnak, an outfielder, whom Scout Jo-Cambria brought into camp. Cambria signed the fellow off the Sagamore, Pa., lots and touted him so highly that Harris moved him into the line-up. . . . The lad made one clever catch and then banged a single to center in his only trip to the plate. . . . He is a tall blond kid, with speed, and Harris is tabbing him for future reference. . . . He will play with the club against the Orlando air-base team

Hank Greenberg has been loaned to the Orlando air base line-up for tomorrow by MacDill Field, and will bat in the cleanup spot . . . Greenberg watched today's game from the Nats' dugout . . . Roberto Ortiz opened the ninth inning for the Nats today with a double to right and then was picked off second base by Pitcher Lanier . . . In that inning the Nats made three hits and drew a walk, but couldn't score, what with Pofahl striking out with the bases loaded . . . Stan Spence is in the doghouse with Harris for loafing on Brown's two-bagger in the third inning.

Les Fleming's 4-Run Homer Beats Tigers

By the Associated Press

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 26.—The New York Yankees came from behind with two runs in the thirteenth inning today to nose out the Boston Red Sox, 3-2.

With the score deadlocked at 1-1, the teams played eight scoreless innings before Bobby Doerr's homer put the Sox ahead in the first of the thirteenth. But Rookie Norman Brown, the third Boston pitcher, entered the game and walked Buddy Hassett and Tom Henrich.

Charlie Keller singled Hassett home with the tying run and Bill Dickey, playing his second game of the spring, broke up the contest with a single that scored Keller after two were out.

Clearwater, Fla., March 26.—Les Fleming, rookie first baseman, hit a home run with the bases filled in the fourth inning today to give the Cleveland Indians a 4-0 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

Al Benton, the losing pitcher, allowed the Tribe only one hit in the first three innings. Russ Peters led off the fourth with a single, Ken Keltner singled and Jeff Heath walked. Then Fleming clouted over the right-field fence.

Joe Heving, starting for Cleveland, yielded three hits in five innings and Steve Gromek gave up only one in the last four.

Phils Beat Birds

Miami Beach, Fla., March 26 (AP).—Paul Masterson and Gene Lambert teamed up today to pitch the Phils to a 5-1 victory over the Columbus Red Birds of the American Association.

The Redbirds made only four hits off the two rookie twirlers. Three came off Masterson who worked seven innings. An error by Bobby Bragan let Columbus score its only run in the fifth.

Meantime, the Phils scored two runs, enough to win, in the first inning on singles by Stan Benjamin, Al Glossop, Danny Litwhiler's fly, Glossop's steal of second and Ron Northey's single.

Big Inning Helps

Los Angeles, Calif., March 26 (AP). The Chicago Cubs, beaten nine times in their last ten starts, scored nine runs in the third inning today against Seattle of the Pacific Coast League and won the game, 11-2.

Bill Lee of the Cubs faced only 12 Seattle batters in the first four innings and did not yield a hit or run, although he was touched for two singles and a run in the fifth. Leslie Fleming took over the pitching job in the sixth.

Lee also helped the Chicagoans with his bat, doubling to score two runs in the third inning.

A's Lose in Ninth

San Francisco, Calif., March 26 (AP).—Ray Perry's single in the ninth inning drove in the run that gave the San Francisco Seals of the Pacific Coast League a 4 to 3 victory over the Philadelphia Athletics today.

The A's had taken a 3-2 lead in the sixth on five singles by Lum Harris, Pete Suder, Felix Mackiewicz, Dee Miles and Al Rubeling, but an error by Tex Shirley permitted the Seals to knot the score in the seventh.

Royals Beat Braves

Sanford, Fla., March 26 (AP).—A quartet of errors and some poor pitching by the Boston Braves gave the Montreal Royals of the International League a 6-0 decision today over the National League club.

Starting Pitcher Manny Salvo was nicked for five runs by the Royals, giving up two in the opening inning and three more in the third frame. Johnny Sain, who relieved him, was charged with the other score in the eighth inning. Johnny Hutchings finished up the game.

The Braves have an off-day tomorrow and Manager Casey Stengel plans to give his charges a stiff fielding drill.

Giants Up Streak

Daytona Beach, Fla., March 26 (AP). The New York Giants ran their exhibition winning streak to three games today with an 8-4 victory over the Brooklyn Dodgers behind a two-hit pitching job by Bill McGee, who blanked the National League champs for six innings.

The Dodgers nicked Cliff Melton for five hits and three runs in the last three frames but couldn't overtake the Giants, who clouted nine safeties off Fred Fitzsimmons and Hugh Casey.

Fitzsimmons walked seven men in the first three innings and was tagged for a triple by Mel Ott and a two-run single by Hank Danning, giving up four runs before turning the game over to Casey in the sixth. A pinch-double by Howard Moss paced a three-run assault against Casey in that inning.

Johnny Rizzo's home run, following a double by Lew Riggs and a single by Pete Reiser, produced three Brooklyn tallies in the eighth after Casey and Rizzo had wrapped singles around a walk to Alex Kampouris for the other run in the seventh.

Fullerton, Calif., March 26 (AP).—Pittsburgh's Pirates today salvaged a free-hitting exhibition game with Sacramento, 12 to 9, after Pepper Martin's Coast Leaguers ran across seven runs off Lefty Aldon Wilkie in the second frame.

Gene Handley scored three of the Sacramento runs with a double during the big rally.

Bob Elliott pounded out a 370-foot homer in the third with a man on base to put the Pirates back in the competition and singled in the next frame with the bases loaded to score two more.

Pro Football Owners Balk At 27 Players

By the Associated Press

New York, March 26. In a surprise move the National Pro Football League club owners today turned down the recommendation of the coaches that the club rosters be reduced to 27 men, and voted to retain the 33-player limit.

The action also killed a coaches' proposal that the substitution rule be changed to permit a player to reenter a game once each quarter. The substitution proposal hinged on the acceptance of the suggested 27-player limit.

Elmer Layden, league commissioner, pointed out the retaining of the 33-player limit did not mean the clubs would not feel the pinch of player losses to the armed services. He said he did think, however, that a new rule providing that every player in training camp must be under contract partially would offset the shortage.

The teams must be down to the player limit by September 20 at the latest, and players in training who then are dropped are subject to waivers, giving other clubs a chance to grab them.

Because of the uncertainty of the player situation, there has been no talk of trades, and it is the opinion that any transactions which might be made before the season opens would be on a cash basis.

Dusek and Szaba Overdo It in Mat Draw at Arena

Ernie Dusek and Sandor Szabo, the National Wrestling Association champ, worked to an exciting and extremely energetic draw last night in the feature wrestling match at Turner's Arena. This was the first main go that has gone the one-hour limit since anyone can remember, and some 1500 fans left the muscle museum feeling somewhat sleepy, but well repaid for their patronage.

Both men put out much more effort than the union requires, and as they stumbled into the dressing room they were too winded to give a statement. However, they probably will petition Promoter Joe Turner to get a new scenario writer before they appear here again. Another bout like last night's, and they'll decide there must be an easier way to earn a livelihood.

The match was rough all the way, and paunchy Casey Berger, the arbiter, was as winded as the participants at the conclusion, due to his efforts to keep order.

Skeet Instructor To Fire in Elks Shoot Sunday

Frank Huseman, veteran shooter, and instructor at the Ager Gun Club, will participate in the Elks Lodge No. 15 skeet Sunday at O'Donnell's Farm just off Marlboro Pike, and also will bring along a full team for the benefit event for the Navy Relief Fund.

Entries also were received yesterday from the Kenwood Skeet Club, National Capital, Elks, Forestville, Md.; Glen Burnie, Md.; Cambridge, Md., and Saulsbury, Md.

There will be five classes—A, B, C, D, E—with shooting to start at 9 a. m. and continue through 7 p. m.

The entry fee is $4.20, which includes the 50 targets and shells. Ralph Murdock, well known local sportsman, is in charge of the shoot, and stated that Washington's top-notch skeetmen would compete.

W.-L. High Five Smeared, 45-12, At Glens Falls

Special Dispatch to The Post

Glens Falls, N. Y., March 26.—Washington-Lee High basketers, of Arlington, Va., were thoroughly routed in their initial start in the Eastern States Scholastic Basketball tournament here tonight, losing a 45-12 judgment to the defending champion Memorial High five, of West New York, N. J.

Though winners of the Metropolitan Washington title, the Little Generals were never in tonight's clash, trailing by such one-sided scores as 18-2, 37-7 and 41-10 at the conclusion of the successive quarters.

John Marshall High School of Richmond, Va., lost its opportunity to play, in the semifinals when it was defeated by the fast and lighter Holyoke (Mass.) High School team, 32 to 30.

M. Shapiro and E. Shapiro started off the score for Holyoke, each dribbling in a field basket. Gantt and Marshall, of John Marshall, retaliated with field goals and a foul by Gantt put the Richmond team in the lead. The score see-sawed to the first quarter when two fouls by E. Shapiro, of Holyoke, brought the score to a 10-10 tie.

Atlantic City and Eagles Close Local Hockey Play

Involved Playoffs Continue With Sea Gulls Making Debut; Eagles Have Played 6 Games

The Washington Eagles are to close their home season at Riverside Stadium tonight when they play host to Atlantic City's Gulls, Hershey Cup champions, in a crucial United States Amateur Hockey Association championship playoff game at 8:30 o'clock.

As a special added feature a round-by-round description of the world's heavyweight championship boxing bout involving Joe Louis and Abe Simon will be broadcast over the amplifier. Hoot Gibson, former cowboy idol of the silent films and star of Col. Jim Eskew's Rodeo, is to face off the puck prior to the start of the game.

The Gulls, fresh from their double round robin victory over River Vale and Baltimore in triangular competition, will be making their first start in the playoffs.

Tommy Burlington, Atlantic City's amazing little center who has set an all-time Eastern League scoring record of 128 points over a curtailed 148-game season, will be spotlighted by the invaders. Burlington shattered the old mark of 101 points formerly held by the New York Rovers' Ab Collings with a six-point performance against the Eagles several weeks ago.

Burlington, the property of the Cleveland Barons, of the American Hockey League, will be making his last appearance locally prior to going into professional hockey.

The Eagles will be bolstered tonight by the availability of Paul Courteau, flying winger, who has been reinstated for tonight's game against the Gulls, but who will not be eligible to play the final game against the Gulls in Atlantic City.

Art Lessard, the Eagles' big defenseman who twisted his left leg against the New York Rovers in Madison Square Garden last Sunday, also will be back on the firing line tonight. Lessard returned to the lineup Wednesday night as the Eagles overcame a three-goal deficit to defeat the Olympics in Boston, 7-5.

The Eagles currently are tied with Johnstown for the playoff series' lead, each team having eight points. Both the Eagles and Blue Birds have two remaining games with Atlantic City, and victory for the Eagles tonight would establish them as the choice to go on to the playoff championship.

The Chief Surprises With Triumph in Tropical's Coral Purse

Doublrab Beaten by Eccentric

Small Crowd Sees $14.70 Shot Score By Half a Length; Fine Time Recorded

By the Associated Press

Tropical Park, Fla., March 26.—Maxwell Howard's roguish 7-year-old, The Chief, today snapped out of an extended slump and jumped right back into prominence with a driving half-length triumph in the 6-furlong Coral Reef Purse. The unreliable gelding, a puzzle even to his own stable, was in a running mood on this occasion, as attested by his time of 1:10 3-5, only three-fifths of a second slower than the track mark. The son of Pennant was a $14.70-for-$2 chance in the field of eight fleet sprinters.

Doublrab, representing F. Campagna and a strong choice, bowed in the last few strides but saved second money by two lengths from W. Rold's much-improved Hour Al. The smallest crowd of the meeting—5565—viewed the sport.

The Chief has been an erratic fellow ever since his brilliant campaign as a 3-year-old. At that age, he won a Brooklyn Handicap and a Lawyer Stakes, making many fans forget his more illustrious stablemate, Stagehand, at least temporarily. He has since become cunning, only occasionally taking it into his head to run and reveal his old-time speed and class.

Ted Atkinson found a way to make the veteran run this afternoon. He broke the Howard color-bearer well from the outside, then allowed the unpredictable old fellow to rate along in fourth place while Doublrab and Hour Al, the speed demons, battled closely for the lead, followed by Daily Delivery. The Chief began to gain near the top of the stretch. He whirled up on the outside and got to the front a few strides from the finish.

Selections at Tropical Park.

Dear Al:

I'm sorry that the Maryland Racing Commission hasn't gone out 100 per cent against the "nerving" of horses. However, I believe I can see their point. The immediate barring of all nerved" horses would work as a hardship on many owners, particularly those with only one or two horses on which they depend for a living. The percentage of "nerved" horses is not large, however, and many of these horses underwent this operation before coming to their present owners and were purchased or claimed without knowledge that the horse was "nerved." Next to the immediate ruling off of all such horses, the most effective means of control is to set a date after which any horse found to have had the feeling removed from his leg or legs will be barred. Last Wednesday the commission accepted the Mahoney "nerved dector" and reported this would be used in a survey of "nerved" horses at the Maryland tracks. It was also reported that owners and trainers would be compelled to list their "nerved" horses and that jockeys would be allowed to decline mounts on such horses. In addition, it is said that the list would be available to the public. Just what is going to happen if a horse listed as "nerved" breaks a leg, piles up a field and causes serious injury or even death to jockeys I do not know. Just who will be held responsible? Not the horseman, for he would be running his horse within the rules. Not the track because it would be operating under the commission. It looks like the commission would be sticking its chin out. However, the commission is to be congratulated for its action in starting the ball rolling toward elimination of the cruel practice which for years practically everybody knew about, but nobody seemed to do anything about. I received a postcard yesterday signed "Bits," and it reads: "Understand Gassem O'Brien has been named air warden for the Bowie backstretch. Please try to confirm." See you on the rail. BILL.

First race—MATADORA, from the Greentree Stable, may prove the best of the maiden juveniles gathered for the first event. This one is highly regarded by the barn. SHARE REWARD is a good one, according to reports, and shoulld be close. BETTY LEON for the show.

Second race—ROCK MAKER has been racing well in Florida and deserves a chance to turn back this kind of sprinters. ARMOR BEARER is better than recent races show. TORCH GLEAM to fill out the money bracket.

Third race — HELEN'S BOY has worked well and promises to be in the thick of contention in this field and I'm going to try to make him take it all. JUSTA RAINEY and EVEN TEMPO to battle it out for place money.

Fourth race — BOY ANGLER seems to have a wide edge over this field and needs only the right ride to take it all. BALLINDERRY is fit, as recent efforts suggest, and should be a factor. WELL ALLRIGHT for the minor cash.

Fifth race—FANCY FREE, breaking off the rail, may make every post a winning one in this small, but rather open, affair. TOPEE will be moving in the stretch run and may hold EXPLORATION safe for the second position.

Sixth race—SIR MARLBORO deserves another chance. I'm tossing out that last and I'm stringing along with this fit horse. PORTER'S CAP has worked well and will be brushing up for a stake at Bowie. OUR BOOTS for the show end.

Seventh race — SPANISH WAY likes this route and has all the earmarks of a winner. STAND ALONE is not overmatched with these and is a threat. BLUESTRING should take a piece of the payoff.

Eighth race—HADA MOON seems best of those scheduled to face the starter in the day's finale. LONG PASS and CHANCE RUN to fill out the cash circle.

Substitute race—If this event is used, I'll take BUFFLEHEAD, PILATESUN and HIGH OMAR.

Keeneland Boosts Purses To $95,100

By the Associated Press

Lexington, Ky., March 26.—Keeneland race course's spring meeting will be the richest in the nonprofit track's history.

A total of $95,100, an increase of $2000 over last year, will be offered in stakes and purses during the 11 days of competition, April 9-23, it was announced today.

And Uncle Sam probably will get a cut—other than taxes—of the net receipts. President Louis Lee Hagin 2d said "Keeneland is planning to give some sort of substantial aid to the armed forces of the United States as soon as funds are available. For that reason we were not able to increase purse distribution as much as we might have done under other conditions."

In previous years Keeneland Association has given its net receipts to the University of Kentucky and other institutions.

Keeneland will offer a daily program of seven races except on two Saturdays and the final day of the meeting. There is no racing on Mondays. There will be five stakes, topped by the $10,000 Bluegrass event, on the closing day.

A number of Kentucky Derby eligibles and some of the leading handicap horses, including Whirlaway, are expected to perform here.

Duffy, Zenzega To Box Monday At Turner's

Matching of Bill Duffy, chief petty officer at the Naval Air Station, Anacostia, against Phil Zenzega, of Baltimore, for a special six-rounder on Monday night's boxing show at Turner's Arena was announced yesterday by Promoter Joe Turner.

Duffy, former Villanova University welterweight star, made such a hit in his debut last Monday that Promoter Turner answered the demands of fans by bringing him back against one of Baltimore's rugged and aggressive scrappers.

Oscar (Thunderbolt) Wright, the Washington colored flash who has won 17 out of 19 fights, will feature the show in an eight-rounder against Irish Billy Murray, of Bellaire, Ohio, who has won 47 out of 49 fights, and holds a victory over Carl Guggino, of Hartford. Promoter Turner stated that Murray had a run of 33 victories until he lost to Frankie Foley, in Tampa, in the same town where he decisioned Guggino. Recently he scored a technical knockout over Freddie Foran in Hartford.

Gus Mirman, the "Butcher Boy," with two victories in a row this season, will meet Arthur Johnson, of Baltimore, in a six-rounder. Mirman flattened Otis Harris last week on the card in which Duffy won a tough bout from Sammy Daniels.

Alsab to Arrive at Louisville Tuesday

Louisville, Ky., March 26 (AP).—Alsab, 1941 juvenile thoroughbred champion, and an outstanding nominee for the 1942 Kentucky Derby, will arrive at Churchill Downs Tuesday of next week.

Col. Matt J. Winn, president of the Downs, where the Derby will be run May 2, said Owner Albert Sabath had notified him Alsab would be shipped from Hialeah Park Monday arriving here Tuesday to prep for the Derby.

McCluskey Picked 11th Time as Track All-American

By the Associated Press

New York, March 26.—Joe McCluskey, the "iron-man" distance runner of the New York Athletic Club, was named today as an all-America runner for the eleventh time in 12 years.

Heading the team picked by Daniel J. Ferris, secretary-treasurer of the Amateur Athletic Union, for the 1942 A. A. U. Almanac, McCluskey was chosen as the leading performer in the 15-kilometer run and the steeplechase. Since he was first picked in 1931 McCluskey failed to earn a place on the team only in 1936.

Lou Gregory, of the Millrose A. A., New York, was given a place on the team for the ninth time, being named for the 10,000 meters, 20 kilometers and 30 kilometers runs. Three places also went to John Borican, of Asbury Park, N. J., in the 1000-yard run, the pentathlon and decathlon.

DO YOU KNOW ABOUT BOTTLED BEER AND ITS PLACE IN SERVING GOOD ECONOMICAL MEALS?

NOTHING adds more to the life and zest and tang and all around enjoyment of dinner than a few bottles of NATIONAL BOHEMIAN BEER. Your friendly dealers all over town have it handy and ready for you.

The few cents you pay for it, you more than save in being able to cut costs on the other items of the meal. For instance, try this tasty combination: Bone your portions of fish. Roll in corn meal and fry in leftover bacon fat. Remove the fish to a hot platter, and in the skillet pour a half inch thickness of corn bread batter. Cook the corn bread right in the fat in which you fried the fish. Then serve the hot fried fish, the hot corn bread and your bottles of NATIONAL BOHEMIAN BEER—in one grand taste-tantilizing course. You will enjoy a wholesome, nourishing and delicious dinner. You'll be sure of an economical meal. And you'll get a first hand idea of how much a glass of NATIONAL BOHEMIAN BEER adds to a meal.

And there's one more thing to know about NATIONAL BOHEMIAN: It's not just ordinary beer. It's the most expensive ten cent bottle of beer your dealer carries in stock. He pays more for this great beer than for any other ten cent bottled beer he carries—pays the price to give you top quality.

Your dealer can sell you many other beers. When he gives you National Bohemian, he is paying more to give you a beer which he feels is worth the extra price he pays—and yet it costs YOU no

Hayman Favored in Feature Bout of A. A. U. Card Tonight

Finals in 16 Classes Set At Arena

J. C. C. Star Faces McLaughlin; Hughes, Doherty Bout Also Promises Action

Lou Hayman, burly Jewish Community Center heavyweight who is coming out of retirement after a two-year absence will be the favorite over Joe McLaughlin tonight when they climb into the ring at Turner's Arena to settle the District A. A. U. heavyweight championship.

This change, which finds the two kayo clouters exchanging roles they occupied two weeks ago immediately after McLaughlin had scored a 23-second knockout over Bill Barber, is the only late development as the tournament reaches its climax. A half dozen fights of "main go" caliber are among the 16 listed for championships in both senior and novice classes. The first bout is scheduled for 8:15.

Hayman, as taut as a bowstring after two intensive weeks of preparation for the most important match of his youthful career, has found new favor with the fans because of his impressive workouts at the Center gym, while McLaughlin has had a tough time getting into shape. Lou's left hook, a potent weapon that floored more than one opponent during his collegiate career at Columbus University, is expected to be the instrument that will be the Irishman's undoing. It has been working like a mowing machine in training.

Burke, Former Yank Coach, Dies at 67

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, March 26.—Jimmy Burke, who ended a lengthy career in baseball when he retired as coach of the New York Yankees in 1933, died today of pneumonia at St. John's Hospital.

Burke was never without a baseball job from the time he began playing as third baseman with Peoria in 1896 until ill health forced his retirement. He was 67 years old.

Manager of the St. Louis Cardinals for one year and the Browns for three years, Burke played with the Chicago White Sox and Pittsburgh Pirates and was a coach with the Detroit Tigers, Boston Red Sox, Chicago Cubs and Yankees.

While managing Indianapolis, Burke released Joe McCarthy because of weak hitting.

Committee Cancels Bannockburn Tourney

The Bannockburn Invitation Championship, a four-ball tournament which was inaugurated in 1940 and was scheduled for June 12-14 this year, was canceled yesterday by E. R. Ferguson, jr., chairman of the golf committee.

With the Chevy Chase Invitation having been canceled on Tuesday, the District golf card will be lacking an Invitation affair for the first time since 1911.

The Bannockburn tournament, an 18-hole qualifying and match play affair, attracted 30-odd teams the first year but last June the field was nearly doubled. It was one of the most popular affairs on the local card.

Bannockburn officials asked for the dates at the winter meeting of the District Golf Association, but due to transportation and working conditions which have developed they figured a three-day affair would be too much.

The intraclub card will go on as usual and will be announced shortly.

Crowley to Switch Benches as Rams Play Relief Game

By the Associated Press

New York, March 26.—Jimmy Crowley, who is on leave of absence from Fordham football coaching to handle the Naval Air Corps Training Station at the University of North Carolina, will lead a gridiron team from there against Fordham, probably on November 28, in a war charities' game.

George Diffenbaugh Retained at G. W. U.

Kenwood Country Club professional, George Diffenbaugh, will again coach the George Washington University golf team, it was announced yesterday.

George Vass, captain of the Colonials and the No. 1 player, turned in a one-under par 70 in a practice round yesterday and followed it up with a lesson from Diffenbaugh, to see what was wrong.

Charles Stockwell, a Columbia Club member, with Vass will give the G. W. golfers a District representation of at least two.

The schedule has not yet been completed but the Colonials will play Georgetown twice. They met the Hoyas once last year and lost, 9-0.

Alf Paul will edit a new monthly publication at Kenwood Club, Kenkapers. Committee chairmen appointed recently, in addition to Frank Schrider, golf committee boss, were Fred McCrary, greens, and R. H. Hart, handicap.

Miss Hughes' Figuring Is Great Factor in Potomac Hunt

When Laura Ann Hughes, 16-year-old District rider, learned that she would have to carry 60 pounds of lead if she intended to ride her Chateaurock in the Dunboyne Challenge Cup event at the Potomac (Md.) Hunt point-to-point Saturday, it set her to figuring. As a result of her efforts, the committee obligingly put on a ladies' race at catch weights that threatens to be the outstanding outing on the card.

Slim Miss Hughes, who hunts regularly with Potomac, telephoned all the point-to-pointing ladies of her acquaintance and extracted promises from them that they would enter. So many agreed that the committee was delighted to grant the request.

Those who will join Miss Hughes included Mrs. Frank McSherry on her cross-country veteran, the 18-year-old Fox; Nancy Hanna on Gone Away, Judy Johnson on Thomas T. Mott's Port Law, Robin Hunt on Dr. Robert E. Moran's rapid Metom and two Warrenton, Va., entries, Mrs. Robert C. Winmill on Keeline and Ruth O'Keefe on Sun Alv.

Keeline, which won his maiden point-to-point effort in the Warrenton Hunt pair race last week, finished in excellent shape and figures to be on one of the toughest competitors on the list. Sun Alv, who carried Miss O'Keefe in her first race at Warrenton, also is a formidable contender.

The Dunboyne Challenge Cup race, in earlier years the feature of the Potomac card, has only three entries at the moment—Oliver Durant's Red Sailor, George T. Walker's Metope and Mrs. McSherry's Regiment. However, several others are expected to be added before post time.

Same Eastern, Same Guyon, New Players

War or no war, the spring scene over at Eastern High School's athletic field is the same as it has been for the last 20 springs.

From probably the same chair in the same safe position behind the backstop, Coach "Chief" Guyon directs activities in the same field marshall manner he has used for 20 years.

The only change is in the identity of the 40-odd youngsters cavorting around the field, the squad from which Eastern's 1942 baseball team will be chosen. Coach Guyon even deviates slightly from his usual spring optimism when he considers his players.

"Of course, we'll have plenty of .600 hitters," he remarks, "but not as many as we want. Our pitchers will probably win every time they go out, but the opposition might get as many as four hits sometime. In the face of these possibilities, I can hardly make any predictions."

Fears Western

The "Chief," oldest of Washington's scholastic baseball coaches, reveals several real worries when he goes serious, however.

"We know already that Western is our main rival as far as the interhigh championship is concerned. Central, too, might give us a little trouble. The rest of the public school teams don't figure—and that includes Anacostia and the big Pole pitcher I hear it's keeping under cover."

Fishing with JACK BELL

Some phrase-making old trout fisherman once said, "When the birch buds are as big as a squirrel's ear, trout will take a fly." But, regardless of the truth of this sign many a fly fisherman reaches his favorite stream on opening day to find it coffee colored and running bank high. If he be a normal rational trout angler he'll change his tackle and go to bait and spinner fishing, or a lively minnow. But if this angler be a dyed in the wool, confirmed and addicted fly-fisherman he'll stick to his flies and nothing else.

The fly-fisherman will probably do well to concentrate on wet flies, nymphs and steamers. A trout may be fooled with a dry-fly early in the season on a clear stream, but if you must try, use 'em when the sun is high at midday, but the general rule is to fish 'em wet, and fish 'em deep.

The displays of fishing tackle in the showcases of local sport shops are interesting now with the new fresh supplies. Better get what you need—early—for the supply is quite limited. Many items now are not obtainable, reels especially are difficult for the shops to obtain, and it won't be long before good split bamboo rods will be impossible to buy, due to the limited supply of good Tonkin and Calcutta cane. Further supplies from India and China have already been cut off.

Here is a bit of pleasant news for the trout angler who likes to fish the tumbling, quarreling waters of Fishing Creek, above the Frederick Reservoir.

Much concern has been felt that the two forks above the reservoir, whose source is in Gambrill State Park, and are the principal water supply of Frederick's reservoir, would be closed to all angling for the duration of the war. This was due to fears of possible sabotage and pollution of the waters.

At a meeting of the mayor and aldermen of Frederick, after considering all angles of the situation, it was decided to take no action on requests to close those waters to fishermen. This means that anglers can continue fishing in the two most picturesque trout streams in the State of Maryland.

At a recent meeting of the regional council of Izaak Walton League, chapters from the States of Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland and the District of Columbia, in Brunswick, Md., the question of allowing resident anglers of Virginia and West Virginia to fish in the Potomac River came to the fore again. This has been a long and controversial question to sportsmen of these States.

At present persons not residents of Maryland, wishing to fish in the river, must first obtain a nonresident license from Maryland. It was suggested that it may be possible for Maryland to issue a special fishing license for fishing in the Potomac River only. Money so obtained from nonresidents could be earmarked for a special fund for law enforcement and river improvement. A committee has been appointed to investigate the possibilities, and report to the next meeting of the regional council.

If such a license will be considered, we see no reason why anglers of the District of Columbia should not be included.

Louis, Simon in Heavyweight Title Fight at Garden Tonight

been knocked out. Only Tommy Farr and Arturo Godoy have been able to go the distance.

Although Louis isn't predicting the round in which he expects to put Simon away—he generally leaves that to Blackburn—he has no doubt of the result. The champion declared yesterday as he wound up training at Camp Dix, "I'm going in there from the first sound of the gong and make a hard, fast fight. For one thing I'm going in the ring in 100 per cent better shape than the last time I fought Abe in Detroit. I have trained well for this fight. I'll get it over as quick as possible for Chappie's (Blackburn) sake."

The champion worked two rounds with Eddie Blunt and one each with George Nicholson and George Fitch in his last drill. He scaled 207 when he finished and expects to enter the ring at 206½. Weighing-in ceremonies are set for noon tomorrow at the Garden.

Abe Full of Pep

Simon, working at Summit, N. J., closed his training yesterday with a vigorous session and when Trainer Freddie Brown called a halt Big Abe was still anxious to continue. He pounded Johnny Skor, who fights Claudio Villar in the semiwindup, at will and finished up with 12 rounds of calisthenics and hitting both the small and big bags. After the drill he weighed 247½.

The challenger, who generally leaves the talking end to his manager, broke his silence to say that he expects to win. "Tell all my friends that I am going to lick Louis and I'd like to have them all there to see me do it. I feel great. I am in the best condition of my career. Joe can't go on forever and I believe this is my chance, my real opportunity to be crowned champion," Simon added.

Many high Army officials will attend the show, headed by Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson, who'll address the crowd before the main bout. Lieut. Gen. Hugh Drumm, commander of the Second Corps Area, will also be present. Governors Island will send a 50-piece band to entertain between the bouts.

Promoter Jacobs announced that American servicemen all over the world will hear the fight by short wave radio.

Gas Company Stock Issue Gets Approval

Authorization for increased capitalization of 42,500 shares of $4.25 cumulative preferred stock was granted "reluctantly" to the Washington Gas Light Co. by the Public Utilities Commission yesterday.

The gas company had filed a petition about a year ago for authorization of 90,000 shares of the $4.25 stock. This is to pay off $2,600,000 in outstanding short-term loans and $500,000 more expected loans, and to increase its operating facilities.

The P. U. C., however, was unwilling to grant authorization unless there was some assurance that there would be an issuance of the new stock in the near future. The commission proposed to authorize only as many shares of the stock as the company proposed to issue, but the company held that since the stockholders had voted for 90,000 shares, the directors could not ask for less.

Company Entered New Plea

The Gas Co.'s New York attorneys, however, agreed with the P. U. C. that the lesser authorization would not be irregular.

Instead of revising their original petition to one for a lesser authorization, the Gas Co. Wednesday entered a new request for the issuance of 40,000 shares of $5 preferred stock which had been authorized in 1937.

P. U. C. Chairman Gregory Hankin dissented from the majority decision of the commission in approving the authorization of the new stock, holding that the issuance of the previously authorized stock should be acted upon first.

Quarterly Dividend Declared

The majority opinion, written by P. U. C. Commissioners James H. Flanagan and Charles W. Kutz, stated that the order for the authorization of the new stock should have further study, but that the urgent need for permanent financing did not allow for delay.

Because there is no "yardstick" for measuring the effect on the public interest in the distant future of a present authorization, the commission reserves consideration of the authorization of the other 47,500 shares requested until the need for issuance and sale of them should arise.

Meanwhile, the Gas Company yesterday declared the regular quarterly dividend of $1.12½ on the outstanding $4.50 preferred stock; and the quarterly dividend of 37½ cents a share on the common stock, payable in May to holders of record April 15. The preferred dividend is payable May 11 to holders of record April 30.

D. C. Store Sales Up 34%

Washington department stores sales in the week ended March 21 spurted 34 per cent above the volume for the corresponding period last year the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported last night.

Indicating that last year's record retail sales will be surpassed with ease are figures showing that Washington store volume for the four weeks ended March 21 was 38 per cent heavier than in the same 1941 period.

Favorable weather and crowded stores this week gave signs that Easter shopping was continuing at a new record level here.

Sales in the Fifth Federal Reserve District as a whole were 34 per cent heavier in the week ended March 21 and were 40 per cent improved in the four-week period. Baltimore sales were 36 per cent up for the week and 45 per cent up for the four-week period.

Oil Wildcatters Plan Test of W. Va. Area

Pittsburgh, March 26 (AP).—Michael Benedum and Joe Trees, America's No. 1 oil wildcatters, disclosed today they had acquired leases on 200,000 acres in West Virginia and started drilling deep test wells in the hope of reviving oil production there and relieving the East Coast petroleum shortage.

The two, who drilled their first oil well 46 years ago within gunshot of the No. 1 deep-test well, are staking $500,000 on their belief that a vast pool of oil lies untapped in the Oriskany sands near the Ohio River in the west central section of the State.

Engineering Awards At 177 Million in Week

New York, March 26 (AP).—Engineering construction volume for the week ended today was estimated by Engineering News-Record at $177,115,000 compared with $273,702,000 in the previous week and $126,284,000 for the corresponding period last year.

This brings the total for 1942 to $1,993,088,000, a gain of 36 per cent over the aggregate for the 13-week period last year.

Two New Directors Elected by Pennroad

Wilmington, Del., March 26 (AP).—Pennroad Corporation stockholders today named two new directors and reelected three members of the present board. The new directors are former United States Senator Daniel O. Hastings, Wilmington, and Carroll Dunham 3d, New York.

Directors reelected are George W. Bovenizer, New York; John H. Mason, Philadelphia, and Herbert A. May, Pittsburgh.

New York Cotton

New York, March 26 (AP).—Late profit taking and hedge selling cut sharply into cotton futures' early gains of 1.35 a bale today, but left prices 40 to 60 cents a bale above Wednesday's close.

The uptrend, continuing from late last week, was based on expanded mill buying against future contracts or expected contracts, observers said. They commented that the demand for cotton textiles for Government and civilian purposes appeared limitless.

Cotton futures prices have moved up 3.50 to 4.00 a bale since the rise began, some deliveries climbing to within ½-cent a pound of the season's best levels established in late January.

Trade interests were believed to have bought in the past week or ten days contracts calling for delivery of between 100,000 to 250,000 bales of cotton.

Bread Sales May Rise on Sugar Rationing; Cheese to Become More Popular Food

Don't be surprised if bread sales move up sharply after sugar rationing begins. Reason: Both British and Canadian experience show that when sugar became scare Mr. and Mrs. Average Briton and Canadian made up the difference in their diet by eating more bread. So sharp was the rise in Britain that flour consumption bounded up 40 per cent.

Ham on rye: Eaters of ham sandwiches on rye bread before the war is over may find their rye bread and rolls without the customary caraway and poppy seeds. Trade circles say caraway, usually brought here from Holland and Poland, doesn't thrive in the United States. Narcotics authorities won't permit broad growing of poppy seeds in this country for fear an illicit drug traffic might spring up. From poppies may be made opium and morphine as well as seeds for rye bread.

Jeep. Explanation of how the Army scout car got the name of "Jeep" comes from Delmar G. Roos, chief engineer at Willys-Overland.

Some of the first 1500 small reconnaissance cars delivered to the Army early in the defense program carried the letters "g. w. p." on their sides. These letters stood for "general war purpose," the use to which the Army thought they would be adapted. G. w. p. was contracted with use to g. p., and, eventually, was evolved the name "jeep." Today the little reconnaissance cars in the Army are called "peeps." The name "jeep" is applied to a larger vehicle of the scout car type.

Behind the coming ration card: Every time a gasoline-bearing tanker is sunk or transferred from the Gulf to East Coast service, nearly 100,000 passenger automobiles must (1) get their motor fuel by some other transportation means, or (2) all users in Eastern territory must get along with a little less.

Rubber wrinkle: Electricity has been elected by B. F. Goodrich Co. as watchman to make sure new fire hose, now made with a reclaimed rubber content, is finished without lining flaws. "The rubber lining used for the new victory hose is passed between two metal plates charged with a potential of up to 40,000 volts," says William S. Richardson, a Goodrich official. "If an imperfection, thin spot, foreign matter or other defect exists in the wartime hose lining, the electricity is discharged through the bad spot and sets off an alarm bell system that automatically halts the entire process at the point of defect."

Cheese: Expect cheese production to continue to expand. Cheese and bread have become the standard lunch for many British war plant workers. High food value of cheese in proportion to weight makes it a favored cargo on the transatlantic bridge of ships.

Total American cheese production last year was 723,550,000 pounds, an increase of 20 per cent over 1940, but in January of this year production had risen to 40 per cent above a year earlier. The food value in 5 ounces of American (cheddar) cheese is about the same as in a quart of milk.

Shoes: In a double-barreled move to conserve leather, the Government has (1) earmarked 80 per cent of the best sole leather for military footwear and (2) requested shoe manufacturers to cease manufacture of heavy double-soled shoes.

Salvage: Clarence H. Low, chairman of the New York City salvage committee, warns householders not to throw anything away that may have value as a war material. Instead, take it to a junk collector.

"With all our mighty resources and all our wealth, we still do not have enough to meet the challenge of total war successfully," he said. "Our supplies of tin, rubber, tungsten, manganese, chrome, antimony and hemp have already been cut off by the enemy. Today the battered automobile tire has acquired the significance of an army with banners."

Save and sell to dealers all junk, he says.

$50 Price Ceiling Fixed on Newsprint

Prices of "standard" newsprint were stabilized at $50 per ton for the next 60 days under a temporary maximum price regulation issued yesterday by the Office of Price Administration.

Prior to the expiration date May 30, a permanent price ceiling will be issued, OPA stated. The temporary regulation holds prices to the levels which have prevailed since April 1, 1938. It is effective April 1.

The regulation covers "standard" newsprint, which conforms with the definition of the Treasury Department describing newsprint which may be brought into the United States duty free.

An increase of $3 per ton in prices of newsprint for export to the United States was announced last December by tht International Paper Co., of Canada, effective April 1, 1942. This was followed by similar announcements on the part of other Canadian newsprint mills and indicatios were give that American mills, as in the past, would follow the Canadian advance.

Consumption of newsprint in the United States last year was approximately four million tons, of which about 75 per cent was imported from Canada, the remainder being produced by mills in this country.

WPB Order Limits Use of Honey

Honey became a war material yesterday. In a move to conserve supplies for the use of domestic and military consumers, the War Production Board ordered industrial users of honey not to exceed their 1941 consumption of the sweet in manufacturing ice cream, candy, soft drinks, pastries and medicines.

The board said some manufacturers who formerly used little or no honey have recently become heavy purchasers because of the sugar shortage. As a result, heavy demands have been made upon the supply available for household and other established uses.

War Materials Barred In Flashlight Making

Use of aluminum, crude rubber, nickel and chromium in the manufacture of flashlights was prohibited by the War Production Board yesterday.

Effective Tuesday, the order will require flashlight manufacturers to limit production to 1940 levels, and use a variety of substitute materials such as plastics, glass, hard paper or synthetic resin. After May 31, iron and steel may be used only in reflectors, contact fitting and certain other small parts.

Heater, Ventilator Stocks Are Frozen

The War Production Board said yesterday it had issued telegraphic orders freezing all stocks of unit heaters, unit ventilators, convectors and blast heating coils in the hands of manufacturers.

The equipment is used for heating industrial plants, and WPB said distribution of available supplies by the Government was necessitated because of shortages of materials used in manufacture of the equipment.

The telegraphic orders prohibit shipments except on specific WPB approval.

C. M. Cohn Made Head of Con. Gas

Baltimore, March 26 (AP).—Herbert M. Wagner resigned the presidency of the Consolidated Gas, Electric Light & Power Co. of Baltimore today and was succeeded by Charles M. Cohn, executive vice president since 1931.

Wagner, head of the company since 1915, was reelected chairman of the board. He had held the dual post since 1939.

Cohn was succeeded by Vice President William Schmidt, jr., and Ralph L. Thomas, executive engineer, was elected a vice president.

Wilmer Named President of Griffith Firm

Pere A. Wilmer was elected president of the Griffith-Consumers Co. of Washington at a directors' meeting yesterday, succeeding H. Rozier Dulany, jr., who was named chairman of the board. James E. Black, comptroller, was elected treasurer.

WILMER

Mr. Wilmer, formerly vice president and treasurer, has been associated with the local fuel company in an executive capacity since 1928. A captain in the first World War, he is a member of the Riggs National Bank advisory board and a director of the Frederick County Products Corporation. After the war he became associated with the coal mining industry in Wheeling, W. Va., and later with the Consumers Co. of this city.

Mr. Dulany, the new chairman, fills the vacancy left by the death of W. W. Griffith several months ago. The late Mr. Griffith had been chairman of the coal company since the consolidation in 1928 of the Griffith Coal Corporation and the Consumers Co. He is president of A. S. Pratt & Sons, Inc., chairman of the board of the Southern Oxygen Co. and a director in the following: National Mortgage & Investment Co., National Savings & Trust Co., Potomac Electric Power Co., General Credit, Inc., Frederick County Products Co., the Arcade Co. and the Chevy Chase Country Club.

Mr. Black, the new treasurer, was comptroller of the Griffith Coal Corporation prior to the consolidation and has occupied that position since. He is well known in accounting and fraternal circles.

90% of Output Of National Steel Is War Material

Pittsburgh, March 26 (AP).—More than 90 per cent of National Steel Corporation's output is going directly or indirectly into war production, Chairman E. T. Weir told stockholders today, adding that the output will be increased by new facilities.

During 1941, Weir said in the corporation's annual report, the company spent $18,400,000 for improvements, including two 1200-ton blast furnaces in Ohio Valley and Great Lakes area plants and the reconstruction of a third furnace. An additional 12 million dollars will be spent in 1942, he said, on other equipment including two new electrolytic lines costing about $3,250,000.

The work will be financed entirely by the company, he reported.

Reporting net earnings of $17,102,350 in 1941, equal to $7.75 per share on capital stock, Weir said:

"With much heavier taxation in prospect and the cost of doing business increasing, it is certain that earnings cannot continue to be in the same proportion to operations as in 1941. The best long-range interest of the corporation will be served by maintaining reserves that will enable us not only to keep all properties in a high state of current efficiency but also to prepare against the impact of postwar conditions."

Wholesale Index Edges Upward

Wholesale commodity prices continued their upward trend during the week ended March 21, but were only fractionally higher than the preceding week.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics' index of nearly 900 price series rose .1 per cent to 97.2 per cent of the 1926 level. The index was .7 per cent above the corresponding week of February, 19 per cent above a year ago, 11 per cent above 1937 and 1.1 per cent above 1929.

The overall advance was largely due to an increase of .8 per cent in farm products. Sharp declines took place in banana prices and prices also were lower for oranges, eggs and flour and for potatoes, cheese and pork in the Chicago market.

Stocks Continue to Drift Irregularly Lower; Motor Shares Display Moderate Buoyancy

New York, March 26.—Lack of bids, rather than selling pressure, operated against today's stock market. Potential buyers found nothing particularly stimulating in the news of war or business and most apparently decided to trim commitments a trifle or stand aside. Tax doubts persisted as a handicap, as did apprehension over price controls, priorities and chances of drastic restrictions being imposed on corporate profits.

Moderate irregularity ruled at the start but renewed weakness of a handful of blue chips soon turned prices generally lower. Final losses mostly were in small fractions although a few casualties of 4 to 12 points were noted. Motors revived moderately at the last and small plus signs were retained here and there.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was off .2 of a point at 34.7. Transfers amounted to 301,360 shares compared with 316,345 the day before.

Norfolk & Western dropped 4½ to 143½ and on the year was down about 49 points. West Penn Electric "A," on a few transactions in odd lots, fell 12 points to 46 and for 1942 was off 45 points. These two were at new year's lows or lower, along with American Telephone, Chesapeake & Ohio, Parke-Davis, Woolworth and Westinghouse. Virtually all aircraft were unchanged, while rails, steels, coppers and utilities were exceptionally narrow.

Union Pacific was up one-eighth on a good two months' earning statement. Parke-Davis reacted on the reduction of the dividend from 40 cents customarily paid quarterly to 30 cents, OPA permission for a boost in gasoline and fuel oil prices in the East helped some oils. Carriers were not especially disturbed by the disclosure of a contraseasonal decrease in last week's freight loadings.

Modest gainers included General Motors, Chrysler, Santa Fe, New York Central, International Harvester, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Goodrich, International Nickel and Owens-Illinois.

Rail bonds attempted to resume the upswing, but the majority failed. Commodities advanced under leadership of cotton, which ended up 40 to 60 cents a bale. At Chicago, wheat and corn each were ahead ½ to ¾ of a cent a bushel, and hogs 10 cents higher.

In a spotty curb small plus signs were posted for Creole Petroleum, Gulf Oil, Pennroad and Aluminum Ltd. In arrears were American Cyanamid, Bell Aircraft, Brewster Aero and American Gas. Volume here was around 61,000 shares, vesus 111,000 Wednesday.

Idle Bank Funds Slide 310 Million On Tax Payments

By the Associated Press

Income-tax payments slashed idle bank funds last week to the lowest level in recent years.

The Federal Reserve Board said yesterday that after depositors withdrew funds to pay their taxes the excess reserves of banks had fallen 310 million dollars, leaving $2,850,000,000.

While this amount of lendable funds was regarded as large by banking officials, it was only about a third as large as it was a couple of years ago.

The board's statement said:

"During the week ended March 25 member bank reserve balances decreased 412 million dollars. Reductions in member bank reserves arose from increases of 413 million dollars in Treasury deposits with Federal Reserve banks and seven million dollars in Treasury cash, and decreases of 25 million dollars in reserve bank credit and two million dollars in gold stock, offset in part by decreases of 12 million dollars in money in circulation and 22 million dollars in nonmember deposits and other Federal Reserve accounts. Excess reserves of member banks on March 25 were estimated to be approximately $2,850,000, a decrease of 310 million dollars for the week.

"The principal change in holdings of bills and securities was a decrease of five million dollars in United States Government bonds."

New Hardship: Colored Rubber Heels Banned

New York, March 26 (AP).—If you have been worrying about the rubber you walk on, relax. The Rubber Manufacturers Association said today the War Production Board was permitting normal production of rubber heels so long as they are made entirely of reclaimed rubber and no serious shortage is expected "for the present."

"As rubber heel manufacturers," said the association's bulletin, "have always used reclaimed rubber to some extent in their product, the conversion to all-reclaim heels can be accomplished without seriously affecting either their quality or the volume of production."

But the rubber situation, the association warned, may bring changes in footwear styles.

"For one thing," it said, "your next pair of rubber heels may be available only in black. The industry is voluntarily discontinuing the manufacture of tan, red and other special colored heels. Consumers will be agreeably surprised at how well a black heel and sole look on a tan shoe."

Structural Steel Orders Gain Sharply

New York, March 26 (AP).—New orders for fabricated structural steel in February totaled 220,205 tons, the largest for any month since June, the American Institute of Steel Construction reported today. January bookings were 180,302 tons and in February last year they were 173,559 tons.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, March 26 (AP).—Wheat, rye and soybeans sold at or near 1942 low prices early today's market session, having declined almost a cent from Wednesday's close, but then rallied briskly and finished with corresponding net gains.

Buying that about-faced the market came from dealers who previously had sold short. Brokers attributed the rally partly to reports of wind and bug damage to wheat in some localities in the Southwest. Mills also were reported more active. Receipts at the 12 principal interior terminals amounted to only 525,000 bushels, or 234,000 less than a year ago, indicating there has been a letup in movement of grain. Some dealers said this reflects reduced redemption of loan wheat as a result of the recent price decline.

British Sold 542 Million in U. S. Securities

By the Associated Press

The Treasury revealed yesterday that the United Kingdom sold $542,832,000 of its American securities in the last three years to pay for war materials.

This was in addition to an estimated 500 million dollars of similar securities placed under the trusteeship of the New York Federal Reserve Bank as collateral for a 425 million dollar loan from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. British sources said the remaining United Kingdom investments in this country were of a minor, or unmarketable, nature.

Hit Peak Last Year

Giving figures for the first time the Treasury said the British sales of the stocks and bonds of United States businesses included: 1939, $144,530,000; 1940, $170,931,000, and 1941, $227,271,000.

These sales were designed primarily to pay for war materials purchased in this country prior to lend-lease.

In addition Canada during these years sold $72,518,000 of American investments, including $30,423,000 in 1939, $15,806,000 in 1940 and $26,289,000 in 1941.

Switzerland, Germany, Italy and Japan also sold small quantities.

Swiss Pull Capital

These sales were the principal change in foreign capital movements in and out of the United States last year, except for the withdrawal by Switzerland of $169,646,000 of bank deposits. As long as this country remained neutral the Swiss sent money here both for safekeeping and investment, but reversed the process when the United States became a belligerent.

For all countries the net capital withdrawals totaled $496,923,000, about half of which represented sale of securities.

You might classify Bob Hawk as the guy who knows all the questions.
About the answers, now, you can't be so sure, because Bob is always thinking up things to ask on his Friday night program—"How'm I Doing?" over WJSV—that no one, including himself, can seem to get satisfactory replies for.
Such a one was the one he thought up a couple of weeks ago: If a man stands in one place for an hour and another walks around for an hour, which consumes more energy? The question had the proper piquancy. But then Bob started checking with noted medical and scientific authorities at Columbia University. And one answer was that checking on the answer took more effort than either man consumed.
One professor said instantly that the fellow who stood still would consume more energy because the blood would recede from his body to his feet and increase the heart's work. The man who was exercising would be promoting circulation, thereby lightening the heart's work, thus reducing the expenditure of energy.
The other said the opposite. Both said they would look it up. Both called back three days later to agree that the first professor was right. But by that time Bob had decided that, if the professors took that long, it wouldn't be fair to ask it of the average person.
He has a million of them like that. But it's comforting to know that he never asks one until he's sure it has only one answer.

The East-West players of today's Olympic deal were awarded a par if they held any adverse no-trump contract to eight tricks, or any club contract to nine tricks. Before looking at the official solution, which follows, plan your defense of a three no-trump contract by either North or South.

Today's Hand

| South | West | North | East |
|---|---|---|---|
| Pass | Pass | 1 ♣ | Pass |
| 1 ♡ | Pass | 2 ♣ | Pass |
| 3 NT | Pass | 3 NT | Pass |

Opening lead: 3 ♠.

"Either East or West should open spades against a no-trump contract. If East leads, West must be careful not to play the spade queen on the first trick. The holdup loses nothing except in the improbable event that East has both the ace and king, and gains if North's marked doubleton is king, small, rather than ace, small.

"Should South play the hand at no trump, and should West lead the diamond deuce, the defense should still stop game. Either defender on next gaining the lead should switch to spades."

This is what happened when the hand was played at a seven-table duplicate game:

Three pairs played the deal at a three no-trump contract, and all were set.

Two pairs stopped at one no-trump; one declarer made his contract; the other player made one overtrick.

One pair arrived at a four-heart declaration and went down three tricks.

One pair got to two clubs and made four-odd.

There's a
NEW SPIRIT
in the Easter Parade
Never his head so proud as now . . .
Stars and bars and gold braid on it.
This year a woman must somehow
Wear her heart upon her bonnet . . .
There's a new tilt to our chins . . . a new lilt in our walk . . . as we step out on Easter inspection this year. For this—of all our Springtimes—cannot come and go unnoticed.
The usual seasonal tributes take on brave new significance. Gay Easter bonnets and festive frocks become our individual thumb-snap to tyranny, reflecting the indomitable spirit of a great, free people.
We will look our best. And, beneath flowered corsages, our hearts will stir to a resolute new tempo . . . echoing drum beats from the distance . . . keeping time with those who march on far flung fronts.
And deep within us there will burn the steady conviction that ours shall be the ways of victory and . . . after victory, lasting peace.
